Executive Order Outlines His Duties; Knudsen Becomes An Army General

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday formally placed in the hands of Donald M. Nelson the full and final authority over the Nation's war production program.

A few hours later the Chief Executive announced that William S. Knudsen, who from June, 1940, until now had been the dominant voice in the defense program, had been appointed the War Department's director of production. His nomination to the rank of lieutenant general will be sent to the Senate for confirmation on Monday, the White House said.

Nelson's instructions to take over the gigantic war procurement program, and to "determine all policies, plans, procedures and methods" of every Federal agency relating to procurement and production, were set down in an Executive Order going far beyond the already sweeping promise made by Mr. Roosevelt in a statement Tuesday night.

As if to clinch the huge delegation of power to Nelson—probably the most extensive grant ever given to one man by an American President—Mr. Roosevelt also instructed all Federal departments, agencies and establishments to "comply" with the new production czar's determinations relating to the war effort.

From Chicago, meantime, it was announced that Nelson had resigned his position as executive vice president and director of Sears, Roebuck & Co., the firm for which he has worked ever since graduation from college.

Nelson's powers were seen yesterday as dwarfing those granted by

Nelson Just 'Forgets' To Ask About Pay

By the Associated Press.

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the new War Production Board, forgot to ask about salary in his new post.

He resigned yesterday as executive vice president of Sears Roebuck, surrendering a $70,000-a-year income. Asked what his pay would be in the new job, Nelson confessed:

"I forgot to ask."

White House officials said they assumed he would draw about $10,000 a year.

Baby Hippo Dies; Pinkie Wouldn't Nurse Offspring

Just two days old, little Vic died yesterday, possibly the victim of a curious manifestation of mother love.

Helpless to do anything, Zoo Director William M. Mann and a corps of keepers saw the baby hippopotamus succumb in its tank, alongside mama Pinkie. Its death may have been due to starvation, resulting from Pinkie's refusal to nurse the 107-pound offspring, though Dr. Mann is inclined to think it may have had some congenital defect.

The 4500-pound mother had frustrated all attempts of the baby to nurse. Pinkie seemed intent only upon keeping Vic within her sight. When the little one would try to flank its mother, she would pivot and nudge Vic against the sides of the tank.

Roosevelt Urges Baseball as Usual

President Roosevelt gave his complete approval to organized baseball and classified the game as a definite recreational asset to the Nation during wartime, in a letter to Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

In addition to being in favor of continuance of the sport, the President also suggested increased emphasis on night games.

A Day at the OCD

Dean Landis Tackles Job Of Imposing Unity on Chaos

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

WHEN Dean James M. Landis left the "quiet halls" of Harvard Law School to take the very hot seat of executive of the unwieldy Office of Civilian Defense did he know what he was getting into?

Perhaps he didn't. But those who know him say this quiet man knew what was ahead and was ready and determined to straighten out the tangled mess he inherited.

There have been continual reports of friction among the various OCD divisions, with charges of everybody sniping at everybody else and all the others trying to work directly with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant director in charge of welfare services. Various persons have sat alone in offices for weeks, until finally cold-shouldered out by more powerful opponents.

Workers at OCD yesterday were counting on Landis' quiet determination to put civilian defense on a well-integrated, well-administered basis.

There is a lot of hard work ahead, and Dean Landis knows it. Each day brings a new collection of problems, misunderstandings, factional strife, blunders . . . a few laughs. Yesterday was a typical day in the OCD. Some of the things that took place are recounted below:

MORNING—Remember the old game of "Thimble, Thimble, Who's Got the Thimble?"

Where's the Siren?

Well, in the District of Columbia that's been changed now to "Siren, Siren, Who's Got the Siren?"

First it was "Did You Hear the Siren"—as test after test of the air-raid sounding devices put up to warn the general public of "enemy advances" failed to pan out when it came to making noise.

But yesterday it was worse. There was neither noise nor siren, although Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of District Defense Council, had announced the day before that a large steam device would be tested at the Bureau of Standards between 11 a. m. and 1 p. m.

Herbert Friede, in charge of communications for the council, explained the lack of noise by saying the siren failed to arrive, but he did not know why.

Col. Bolles said sirens were not in his province and Lieut. Col. Beverly Snow, whose office is in charge of siren purchases for the District, could not be reached.

LUNCHTIME—It's on with the dance at the OCD. Square dancing it is, and the purpose is to put color into the cheeks of OCD employes.

It happens on the roof at lunchtime, and as often as not Mrs. Roosevelt joins it. When she's not there—and often when she is—Alice Marble and Mary K. Brown, the tennis champs, call the figures.

The custom started this week when someone remarked how pale-looking were some of the employes in the OCD physical fitness division. "How can we say 'Hale America' to others," they asked, "when we appear to have just finished prison terms?"

Then the First Lady had the dance idea, remembering the fine roof on top the old Dupont Circle Apartments where the OCD is stationed. She volunteered to give instructions in the Virginia reel, long her favorite dance.

Dancing on the Roof

One trouble is a shortage of man power, but the girls get along very nicely, thank you, being each other's partner. Music is provided by a portable phonograph, with lots of records of the "Turkey in the Straw" variety.

AFTERNOON—A smoldering feud between the American Red Cross and the Office of Civilian Defense threatened to flare as volunteers in emergency housing and feeding units tried to figure out where one authority began and the other ended.

Confused, at best, is the local situation—and it was admitted at the national office that confusion was feared when an attempt was made to divide the responsibility in these two fields where the Red Cross has formerly functioned in times of crisis.

At the top, on both sides, it seems, an effort to keep the provinces

Henderson Puts Thumbs Down On New Tires for D. C. Taxis

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Possessing only a seven-months supply of rubber under normal consumption conditions, the United States must resolutely curtail its civilian use until the tide of war is turned, Price Administrator Leon Henderson declared yesterday.

Washington taxi drivers have no greater right to new tires than do many other categories of the Nation's workers who have not been favored, he told the House District Committee.

Obviously impressed by the forthrightness and thoroughness of the Price Administrator's testimony, committee members may reject a bill which would give local taxis a public status, thus permitting them tires to keep rolling. Although further testimony on the bill will be heard, according to Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, no date was set.

"For a long time to come" less than one-fifth of the normal tire supply must suffice the country, Henderson said. He pointed out that there have been used in the Nation annually about 35 million tires for replacement needs, and 15 million more for new autos coming off the assembly lines.

As a result of the closing of the East Indies supply lines, nine million tires "or less" per year will have to serve our needs, he said.

"In my opinion it would be unwise at the present time to modify

Fire Sighted, Desert Crash Is Feared

12 Army Pilots, Actress' Mother Also Are Aboard TWA Air Liner

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 16.—Transcontinental & Western Airlines reported tonight a 21-passenger Douglas Sky Club transport, carrying 18 passengers including Actress Carole Lombard, was missing near Las Vegas and was feared to have cracked up.

The plane, flight three from New York to Los Angeles via Albuquerque, left Las Vegas, Nev., at 7:07 p. m. Thirty minutes later workers at the Blue Diamond Mine reported they saw a flare, then heard an explosion about 30 miles southwest of Las Vegas.

Pilot Art Cheney of Western Air Lines later reported he saw a large fire while flying over Table Mountain.

Actress' Mother Aboard

TWA said the passengers aboard included Carole Lombard and her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Peters, and Otto Winkler, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicity man, returning from Indianapolis where yesterday they participated in a Defense Bond campaign.

TWA said 12 Army pilots boarded the plane at Albuquerque. It did not list their names but said several were lieutenants.

There were three other passengers. Four additional passengers had left the plane at Albuquerque to make room for the fliers.

Capt. Wayne Williams, who began flying in 1928, was piloting the big ship with Morgan A. Gillette as co-pilot and Alice Getz as hostess. Their addresses were not given. Williams recently was in the TWA office at Kansas City.

Search Is Started

W. W. Baker, station manager at Boulder City, Nev., led a searching party toward the scene. TWA prepared to send another party from Los Angeles.

Miss Lombard is the wife of Clark Gable, movie star, and is the former wife of William Powell, also of the movies. She was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., 32 years ago.

Gable chartered a plane to go to the scene.

Japs Massacred U. S. Missionaries, Chinese Report

Chungking (Saturday), Jan. 17 (INS).—All members of the Presbyterian North Mission at Kachek and Nodoa, on Japanese-held Hainan Island, off the coast of French Indo-China, were massacred after the outbreak of the Pacific war, a Chinese communique stated today.

Names listed in Chinese in the communique were deciphered as the Rev. and Mrs. D. H. Thomas, and Miss Burkwall, a registered nurse at Kachek. Stationed at Kachek, according to the 1941 Protestant directory, were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, Miss Burkwall, Miss M. H. Taylor, Dr. and Mrs. Seaton, the Rev. and Mrs. A. E. French. Missionaries listed in the directory as residing in Nodoa were M. M. Moninger, Mrs. M. R. Melrose, Dr. and Mrs. H. F. Birkwall, the Rev. and Mrs. H. H. Bucher.

Australians Halt Jap Advance On Singapore; U. S. Fleet Sinks Five Enemy Ships in Orient

What's Our Fleet Doing?

The Fleet's Out Hunting: Reporter Aboard Tells How

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States Pacific Fleet, Jan. 16.—Somewhere in mid-Pacific this deadly force of warships and planes has patrolled hundreds of thousands of square miles the last few days, almost entirely without incident.

A small number of enemy submarines was reported seen. What happened to them remains for the Navy to say officially in its own time and in harmony with operational secrets.

The hunting hasn't been so good. Most of the shooting has been target practice. No major Japanese force has appeared in these waters since December 7.

Even traces of the enemy are hard to find. The results, therefore, have not been spectacular. It's not that kind of mission. The fleet's specific job is to search the sea with guns and planes by day and night, maintaining long range protection for Pearl Harbor and the rest of Hawaii and for the American West Coast.

Newsmen Have a Seat at Stirring Show

Reporters and photographers were permitted to come along for the first time during this war, traveling aboard heavy cruisers.

Early in the morning we have ringside seats at a stirring air show. Through powerful binoculars that bring an aircraft carrier right up before our eyes, we see fighters and bombers and torpedo planes take off, one by one. Presently they roar

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 16.—With its unanimous adoption seemingly assured, the Republic of Colombia today formally presented a resolution to the Conference of American Foreign Ministers calling for joint breaking-off of relations with the Axis nations by the 21 American republics.

Mexico and Venezuela joined with Colombia in proposing this action to the conference.

The resolution had three main points:

1. It reaffirmed the declaration of the Havana conference that aggression against one American nation must be considered as aggression against all.

2. Such aggression makes obligatory the severance of diplomatic and economic relations between all American nations and the aggressor nations.

3. All signatories pledge themselves not to renew relations with the aggressors by separate or in-

Red Artillery Pounds Nazis In Kharkov

Taganrog Is Also Under Point-Blank Fire, Soviet Says

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 16.—Russian dispatches said tonight that the imperilled Nazi central front with its garrison of some 100,000 men was bleeding to death in the snowy vastness of Russia under the impact of specially equipped Siberian "ghost troops" attacking its flanks, and that the German southern strongholds of Kharkov and Taganrog were under point-blank Red artillery fire.

[The United Press reported the Russians threatened the only Axis communication lines through central Crimea and said that a Red army had encircled Kharkov, whose fall appeared imminent.

[The dispatches said Red shock troops in the Crimea have seized the main highway above Simferopol and are closing in on the railroad between Crimea's capital city and the mainland.]

The Germans launched counter-attacks on several sectors, the midnight Moscow communique said, but they were at tremendous cost and all were declared repulsed.

A sharp increase in air activity was reflected by the communique's announcement that 45 German and

Five for Us

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The sinking of five more Japanese vessels was announced yesterday by the Navy in a communique which indicated that Admiral Thomas C. Hart's cruisers and destroyers may have gone into action.

Two large transports, two large cargo ships and a transport of medium size, were sent to the bottom, the Navy said, by "units of the United States Asiatic Fleet." This action brought the Navy's toll of enemy ships in the Far East to 16.

Hart's submarines have accounted for all prior Jap ships sunk in Asiatic waters, and the use of the term "units" in yesterday's communique was taken to mean that surface warships may have taken part in the latest attacks.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's beleaguered Luzon army fought off renewed Japanese ground and air attacks that appeared to be the preliminary for another all-out enemy offensive.

Dive bombers and attack planes kept up a continuous assault on MacArthur's front lines and artillery positions on rocky Bataan Peninsula.

Enemy shock troops at the same time attempted to infiltrate through Bataan's mountains in what appeared to be a move to capture some of the deadly American and Philippine batteries.

It was these heavy guns, skillfully placed and camouflaged, which were used with such accuracy early this week to give the Japs their first decisive licking of the war. The Yankee and Filipino artillerymen shattered Jap tank and infantry advances, knocked out more than 40 enemy guns and stopped their "big push."

Gen. MacArthur also reported to the War Department yesterday, the

Giving Them 'Jippo'

By Harold Guard
United Press Staff Writer

With Imperial Forces in West Malaya, Jan. 16.—Australian troops, opening their Malaya campaign with a head-on lunge which destroyed 18 to 20 enemy tanks and killed hundreds of invading troops, appeared today to have jolted to a standstill the main Japanese push on Singapore.

The Imperial command, turning over its ace in the hole after nearly six weeks of dismal retreat, revealed that the bronzed and lusty Aussies, trained for months in the wiles of jungle warfare, had swarmed out to meet the Japs on their own terms.

The results were summarized by Maj. Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett, commander of the Australian Imperial Force, in these words:

"Our lads are doing a magnificent job. They are giving the enemy jippo"—hell.

[The German radio said that on the basis of Tokyo reports the Japanese were 62 miles from Singapore Island, being below the Muar River in western Malaya, and that the thunder of guns on the front "can already be heard in Singapore fortress."]

Train Collision Kills 4 Soldiers And Railway Man

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 16 (AP).—Four soldiers and a trainman were killed and an undetermined number of others injured when a switch engine and a train collided head-on on the Missouri Pacific main line at Perla, Ark., 40 miles south of here late today.

Maj. Dwight Lawson, executive officer at the Army and Navy General Hospital at Hot Springs, said six injured soldiers had been brought there, five were under treatment at a Malvern hospital, and an undetermined number of others were taken to the station hospital at Camp Joseph T. Robinson. Five other trainmen, all of Little Rock, were injured.

Too Many Overseas 'Fans'

It's an Unhappy Day for Radio Quiz Fans! Q. and A. Programs Hard-Hit by Censorship

Wartime censorship reached out yesterday toward radio and laid a finger heavily on those "quiz" programs which have mushroomed into popularity in the last few years.

A code of radio practices for the duration of the war, issued yesterday by Byron Price, director of censorship, asked specifically that programs based on impromptu interviews be discontinued. While apparently not interfering with such standbys as "Information Please," "Quiz Kids," "Dr. I. Q.," "Take It or Leave It," and "Vox Pop," whose participants are known to the broadcaster, the code will stop many others known and practiced throughout the country.

Broadcasts like "The Breakfast Club," where a master of ceremonies goes through the audience ad libbing with spectators, undoubtedly will have to be changed. Those in which telephone numbers are selected at random and both sides of the ensuing conversation are broadcast would seem to come under the ban. Any number of programs, some glorified as "clubs," in which request numbers are played, will be affected.

"Any program," said Price, "which permits the public accessibility to an open microphone is dangerous and should be carefully supervised. Because of the nature of quiz programs, in which the public is not only permitted access to the microphone but encouraged to speak into it, the danger of usurpation by the enemy is enhanced . . . Generally speaking, any quiz program originating remotely, wherein the group is small and wherein no arrangement exists for investigating the background of participants, should be discontinued."

Programs, said Price, in which any statement or number or request by an unknown person is broadcast, may give valuable information to the Nation's enemies. Information concealed in apparently innocent remarks or requests, he pointed out, may readily be carried overseas, where American radio is heard.

In addition, he said, such programs may be used to give instructions to enemy agents and saboteurs within this country. To avoid innocent aid to the enemy by broadcasters, he asked that on-the-spot descriptions after air raids or other enemy action contain no reference to locations and structures. Sports

London Expects Cabinet Shake-up

Australian View

Singapore's Plight Laid To London

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 16.—Former Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies today laid the blame for the shortage of British air strength in Singapore and the Malay Peninsula on the shoulders of military leaders in London.

"Whoever is to blame for the shortage of airplanes at Singapore and in Malaya," he said in a broadcast, "it is certainly not Gen. Sir Robert Brooke-Popham."

Removed From Command

Sir Robert was removed at the end of last month as the commander in chief of the British Far Eastern forces with headquarters at Singapore.

Since the Japanese have swept down the Malay Peninsula, he has been criticized as being responsible for inadequate preparations. (One factor cited for the loss of the British battleship Prince of Wales and the battle cruiser Repulse under Japanese air attack was the lack of protecting British aircraft.)

Menzies said:

"When I was passing through Singapore early last year, Sir Robert from the first to last spoke to me about the urgent and predominant need for air strength and particularly fighter strength.

"He is a brave man, but he was in a state of the greatest possible emotional disturbance about our air weakness.

Knew the Facts

"Sir Robert Brooke-Popham knew the facts. The Australian government knew them and the British government knew them.

"Conference after conference took place in London about the question of air strength in the Far East.

"On behalf of Australia, the problem was put as one of the greatest gravity and urgency.

"Accurate adherence to historical fact requires that I should say that the service chiefs in London took a more modest view of the air requirements for Singapore and Malaya than those on the spot."

Heads Will Fall Over Bungling in Orient, Press Says

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 16.—A drastic shake-up in the Churchill government with heads falling in the war and colonial offices because of setbacks in the Orient appeared in the making tonight.

Qualified London quarters said the cabinet changes, for which there has been rising clamor, awaited only the return of Prime Minister Churchill from Washington.

Mentioned prominently as possible selections for a rejuvenated government setup were Maj. Alfred Duff Cooper, recalled as resident commissioner of Far Eastern affairs; Sir Stafford Cripps, who is relinquishing his post as Ambassador to Moscow; Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, head of the board of trade, and Thomas Johnston, secretary of state for Scotland.

Cripps' Star Rising

Prospects of a high cabinet post for Sir Stafford Cripps were enhanced by today's foreign office announcement that he would return to England soon. His star has risen considerably as a result of his success in his Russian mission, highspotted by the recent alliance with Russia.

Capt. H. D. R. Margesson, war minister, and Lord Moyne, colonial secretary and leader of the House of Lords, are believed slated for other assignments.

It was suggested that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, Supply Minister Lord Beaverbrook, Labor Minister Ernest Bevin and Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, may be left out and reconsidered as a war executive body.

The Daily Mail summed up the situation:

"Among members of all parties in the House of Commons, there is deep concern at the weakneses revealed by the course of recent events.

"In some cases this feeling of concern is akin to anger, and Churchill may well be faced with demands for wholesale dismissals from his government . . . He is not likely to accede, and will make a spirited and even challenging defense of the government.

"He may demand a vote of confidence if critics are serious in their persistence.

"But some changes in the government are certain to follow."

Chinese Press Assails Allied War Conduct

By the United Press

Chungking, Jan. 16.—Official Chinese newspapers, presumably reflecting the view of the government, launched bitter new attacks on Britain and the United States today and accused President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill of planning only a perfunctory defense of the Far East while they concentrate on "the destruction of Hitlerism" in Europe.

The President and the prime minister, it was alleged, have decided on a broad plan of grand strategy which envisages a concentration of the major military strength of the two powers for assaults against Germany in Europe and the Middle East while China virtually will be left to fend for herself in Asia.

This strategy is all wrong, the newspapers said, since it will enable Japan quickly to establish her "great Asia coprosperity sphere" and to entrench herself so thoroughly in eastern Asia that she cannot be dislodged, even if Germany is defeated in Europe.

Japan is the weak link in the Axis chain, it was claimed, and should be destroyed first, after which the United Nations can attack Germany from all fronts—including Asia.

Open suspicion was voiced that Washington and London do not intend to send adequate reinforcements to Singapore, the Netherlands Indies and the Philippines.

Aussies Halt Jap Advance On Singapore

the Australian forces in Malaya said that in their first contact with the Japanese, the Australians "ambushed and wiped out to a man advanced units of the invaders who had penetrated into the eastern part of Negri Sembilan."]

For more than 48 hours there had been no word of an Imperial withdrawal on the western front somewhere above the Johore border more than 100 miles above Singapore. The invader and defender had joined decisive battle for the great base tipping the Malay Peninsula, it appeared.

Bulwarking the feats of the Australians were telling blows on Japanese concentrations, transports, communications and shipping by planes of the United Nations, which ranged over the jungles and waters of northern Malaya.

General headquarters reports said heavy bombers attacked Japanese-held Tampin, 120 miles northwest of Singapore. A transport was seen burning fiercely, railway fixtures were blown up and casualties inflicted on the occupation forces.

Other raiders reached farther north to bomb the Japanese airport at Sungei and sink a number of Japanese barges off the west coast.

A communique said, "The general situation on the land front remains unchanged"—the first time in days the land fighting ever had been mentioned, and one of the rare communiques in weeks of hostilities which was free of reference to withdrawals.

Here at the advance headquarters of the western forces calm confidence had replaced the uncertainty and jitters which this correspondent found on the northwest front just a week ago.

The Australians had made the difference. The big story was not that they were in action—since they were known to have been in Malaya for months, it had been assumed they were in action all the time—but that the British Empire had in reserve a fresh army of its most effective troops to throw into the battle of south Malaya when the chips were down and it had become the battle for Singapore.

"The Japs are getting the hardest blows they have had in this war to date, and there are a lot more coming to them," Gen. Bennett told correspondents. Every move they make from now on will be countered by the Australians, who can outmarch, outfight and outwit them.

"Hang on we must, and hang on we will."

In fewer words he put the job up to his men in an order of the day which said:

"Our job is not only to delay the Jap but also to destroy him."

The first official reports, which Bennett termed conservative, said the Aussies had suffered very light casualties in the first round of the decisive battle, while at least 200 of the enemy had been killed.

But an officer shouted down to the press car as it approached the advance headquarters:

"You going to see our lads fighting? They won't disappoint you. They've killed about 500 already."

The first clash of consequence, though it was described as a "local engagement," occurred Thursday in eastern Negri Sembilan Province. The Australians wrecked six Japanese tanks leading a column of infantry and inflicted heavy casualties on the invaders. Imperial casualties were described as comparatively light, though the Japanese had the support of fighters and bombers which blasted and raked the forward contingents.

The Japanese advance forces were covered by intensive bomb diving. In the van were bicycle troops, suicide units used as decoys to feel out British strength, followed by light and then heavy tanks.

Elsewhere on the front, Gen. Bennett said, the Australians destroyed two heavy enemy tanks when they ambushed an advancing detachment. At still another point a herd of about ten Japanese tanks charged across a damaged bridge and the Australians closed in and trapped them.

"The first contact has delayed the enemy advance at least 24 hours," Bennett said.

New Invasion

British Clash With Japs in South Burma

By the Associated Press

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 16.—British forces have clashed with Japanese invaders apparently attempting to drive across southern Burma to the Bay of Bengal, British combined headquarters announced tonight.

A brief communique said contact was made with the invaders last night at Myitta, in a broad valley 12 miles inside Burma, about 20 miles from Tavoy. Tavoy lies on the estuary of a river of the same name emptying into the waters between the Malacca Straits and the Gulf of Martaban.

Headquarters here had no details of the engagement.

To span Burma in this area the Japanese would have to cross rugged mountains rising in some places to 6000 feet or force a narrow pass just north of Tavoy.

Coupled with this action, the British communique said, R. A. F. planes blasted a Japanese airdrome yesterday in Thailand, severely damaging planes on the ground, and machine-gunned an armored train, disabling its locomotive. All British planes returned from these assaults.

Blast at Singapore

Singapore, Jan. 16 (AP).—Fifty Japanese bombers escorted by navy fighters raided this big base again this morning. The invaders have made repeated thrusts at the island all this week.

With visibility bad, today's raiders dropped bombs for several hours in widely scattered areas. British interceptors shot down one Japanese plane, probably got another, and damaged three, the department of information reported.

U. S. Far East Fleet Sinks 5 Jap Vessels

Army communique revealed, that the enemy is "systematically looting and devastating the entire countryside" in the occupied portions of the Philippines.

From Tokyo, meantime, came a claim that Japanese troops have made "new landings" on the western coast of Bataan, possibly an attempt to strike the defenders from the rear.

Military men here thought such a move likely and difficult to prevent, due to the length of the rocky coast, MacArthur's lack of air power, and his limited forces. Even if troops were landed, the threat is not considered highly dangerous. Only small numbers could scramble through the mountains to get at MacArthur's rear or flank, it is felt.

The major attack must come in the northeast, for the only road running north and south in Bataan goes along the shores of Manila Bay. Landing attempts on the bay side of the peninsula would be under the deadly fire of Corregidor's guns and are not expected to be tried.

Sinking of the five additional Japanese ships raises the American Army and Navy's toll of Jap vessels of all types to 30.

Includes Eight Transports

The Asiatic fleet has acounted for eight transports, five big cargo vessels, one large new liner, a minesweeper and a supply vessel. Two submarines were sunk and one captured at Pearl Harbor and Wake Island's doughty Marines sunk a light cruiser, four destroyers, a submarine and a gunboat.

Army airmen sank the Jap battleship Haruna, a destroyer and two lighters. They have damaged two other battleships and several other enemy warships.

Besides these definite successes announced by the War and Navy Departments, the Army has said that it probably sunk at least one more destroyer off Davao, and the Navy has announced the "probable" sinking of an additional transport, another destroyer and a seaplane tender in the Far East.

Only one ship is understood to have been lost by Admiral Hart's fleet, now believed to be operating in the Dutch East Indies. This was the small seaplane tender Pigeon.

Texts of the day's communiques announcing the action follow:

Navy Communique No. 29

Far East: Units of the United States Asiatic fleet report the sinking of five enemy vessels in Far Eastern waters. They include two large cargo ships, two large transports and one medium-sized transport. These sinkings are in addition to enemy casualties at sea previously reported.

Atlantic area: The submarine situation along the Northeast coast of the United States remains unchanged.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Sinking of 2d Ship Off N.Y. Is Confirmed

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Writer

The 7000-ton Allied tanker Coimbra has been sunk 100 miles east of New York, presumably by an enemy submarine, the Navy announced yesterday.

The Navy's announcement confirmed Coast Guard reports Thursday night that a merchant ship, the second in two days, had been destroyed within the American defense zone. The Panamanian tanker Norness was sunk by three torpedoes Wednesday morning about 60 miles of Montauk Point, 150 miles east of New York.

A note of mystery was injected into the Coimbra's sinking by the statement of a Navy spokesman that "the survivors have not been brought ashore and will not be brought ashore." This was interpreted here as most probably meaning that survivors were picked up by or transferred to an eastbound vessel, though there was some speculation they might have been taken captive by the enemy.

Censorship Clamped Down

News of the second sinking followed discovery Thursday by Coast Guard planes of a life raft with four men aboard floating in the storm-lashed and icy Atlantic near a huge oil slick and a lifeboat with ten men nearby. Food and liquor were dropped near the men and Coast Guard boats rushed to their rescue.

These boats have returned sheathed in ice after battling mountainous seas to report the boat and raft could not be found. Later it was reported the men had been picked up by an unidentified ship.

While the search for the survivors went on, the Navy clamped a censorship on all news and ordered the Coast Guard to follow suit. The lag of almost 24 hours between announcement of the sinking by the Coast Guard and confirmation by the Navy was attributed to difficulties in communications.

Same Submarine Blamed

Though the Navy was careful to point out that "the cause of the damage is unknown" and to "assumem" the Coimbra was torpedoed proximity of the sinking to that of the Norness led to the belief here the two vessels might have been victims of the same submarine.

The Norness was sunk by a submarine which made several leisurely circles of the vessel to drive one torpedo into its starboard flank and two into its port side.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 16 (AP).—Leaders of two German organizations were ordered held without bail today on charges of illegally collecting funds from German nationals in Argentina.

The organizations involved were the Union of German Workers and the German Charity and Culture Circle.

Missed Again

Enemy Sub Tried to Ram Rescue Boat

The Navy announced yesterday that a Japanese submarine tried to ram a Coast Guard lifeboat last month which was launched to rescue survivors of a torpedoed and shelled tanker.

This was disclosed in the report of Chief Boatswain Garner J. Churchill, who commanded the power-driven lifeboat when it was sent through heavy seas to rescue the crew of the S. S. Emidio, attaked by a Jap U-boat off Eureka, Calif., December 20.

The little vessel, with five Coast Guardsmen aboard, was out all night in squally weather and rough seas on its perilous mission. About 3 a. m., Churchill reported, they sighted the submarine.

It was lying-to when first seen, he said, but headed for them when they came into view. Churchill said he turned his boat at slow speed to keep from the path of the unlighted vessel, as it was not then near enough for him to make out what it was.

The sub also turned and followed the little Coast Guard boat at high speed. When it became evident that the approaching vessel was attempting to ram the lifeboat, Churchill turned his craft sharply and avoided being hit. As it passed, the Coast Guardsmen saw it was a submarine.

Jap Raiders Press Assault On Indies Bases

By the Associated Press

Batavia, N. E. I., Jan. 16.—Japanese air raiders pressed their assault on Dutch East Indies bases today on a 2000-mile line.

The naval air base at Amboina, in the Moluccan Islands, second of importance in the Indies, was attacked for the second consecutive day. Far to the west, on the other side of Singapore, the Medan airport on the east coast of Sumatra was bombed. In between, it was disclosed officially, the oil base of Balikh Papan, on the lower east coast of Borneo, was bombed yesterday, with one civilian killed and ten wounded.

There were no details of today's raids, but the Netherlands command said that there had been some damage to military installations in yesterday's bombardment of Amboina and that one Australian soldier was killed, six Australian and Dutch soldiers wounded; one civilian killed and five wounded.

The Dutch lost two planes in fighting off this attack but their AA guns bagged at least one and probably two.

The prospect that these repeated raids on both Amboina and Balikh Papan were the forerunners of new invasion stabs was not lost on the Dutch. Landings already have been made on the oil island of Tarakan, less than 300 miles above Balikh Papan, and on the north coast of Celebes.

Tarakan's coastal batteries were disclosed today to have sunk two enemy destroyers after the center of the island had been occupied

The President's Day

By International News Service

PLAY BALL: Over breakfast coffee yesterday Mr. Roosevelt took great pleasure in answering the letter of a great sports figure—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball czar. Replying to Judge Landis' question as to whether the Chief thought baseball should go—come hell and hard times of war—Mr. Roosevelt said "on solely personal opinion" that he felt it honestly best for the Nation to keep the boys in there pitching. Furthermore, he added, he would like to see night games extended this spring and summer so that countless war workers will have an enjoyable way of relaxing after the long grind in democracy's arsenal.

ON THE RECORD: After the regular pow wow with the staff and a few important phone calls, the President retired to the upstairs study and began working on the weighty business of studying, sorting and condensing the notes taken at all the British, American and United Nation staff conferences.

OUT OF THE OVEN: At noon Budgeter Harold Smith, Washington's most harried and heckled factotum, conferred at length with Mr. Roosevelt prior to issuance of the War Production Board executive order.

OFF THE SHELF: Representative Sabath, chairman of the House Rules Committee, brought the St. Lawrence waterway project off the shelf. Sabath told the President—who wants the waterway in the worst way—his committee would report out on it immediately — asked if Chicago couldn't have a nice big shipyard.

NEW NAME FOR KNUDSEN: Big Bill Knudsen, in a snappy gray chalk-stripe flannel suit and bow tie, arrived promptly for lunch at the White House. Along with his lunch tray, Big Bill Knudsen got some startling news and a new name. The President put him in charge of production for the War Department, hung on him the resounding military rank of lieutenant general.

INITIATION: At 2 p. m. the War Cabinet assembled, plus its newest member, War Production Punjab Donald M. Nelson. Duly introduced, inducted and initiated, Nelson will attend all Cabinet meetings as an active member.

RED LANTERN: After the Cabinet meeting the President went back to his office, hung out the red lantern that means no callers, no droppers-inners, no appointments, and went back to the sheafs of notes on the military conferences with the ABCD and other nations fighting the Axis. After dinner the President saw a short movie, relaxed with the White House family a while before disappearing once again in the direction of his study.

Broad New Powers Asked for President

Could Punish Priority Violators With Jail, Fines

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A broad grant of supplementary war powers, including the right to impose steep penalties for violation of priorities orders and wide authority to commandeer private property for defense, yesterday was proposed for the President.

The "second war-powers bill" was introduced in the Senate by Chairman Van Nuys of the Senate Judiciary Committee, who ordered hearings before his full committee on Monday.

Recommended by Attorney General Francis Biddle, the legislation covers into one omnibus measure added war powers needed to supplement the recently reenacted Overman and Trading With the Enemy Acts, Van Nuys said.

Statutory authority for much of the priorities machinery already set up by the President is included in the bill, together with a $10,000 fine or one year imprisonment for violators.

Highlight provisions:

Statutory power for the President to grant priorities to fulfill contracts or subcontracts of all types affecting national defense, and for the President to "require" acceptance of performance under such contracts.

Authority supplementary to existing property seizure laws for the Government to acquire by purchase, donation or condemnation any real or personal property "that shall be deemed necessary for military, naval or other war purposes."

Permits "War Contributions"

Power for the Secretary of War to accept under a special "war contributions" account any gift of money or other property made for a particular war purpose, to convert property donations into money, and to allocate the money to war appropriations without further action by Congress.

Makes false solicitation of war gifts for the Government a felony, punishable by a $5000 fine or five years in prison, if solicited with the intention of embezzling.

Grants the Interstate Commerce Commission emergency powers over motor carriers, with authority "to make reasonable directions with respect to equipment, service and facilities of motor carriers, and to require the joint use of equipment, terminals, warehouses, garages and other facilities."

Removes the present "but only in the open market" restriction on purchase by Federal Reserve banks of Government obligations.

Directs the Secretary of Commerce to waive compliance with the navigation and vessel inspection laws on request of the Secretaries of War or Navy "to the extent deemed necessary in the conduct of the war."

Compensation for Wardens

Extends Government compensation to air-raid and fire wardens injured while on duty. Duly appointed wardens serving on a voluntary basis paid less than $100 a month would be regarded as receiving $100 monthly for purposes of benefits.

Grants free postage on ordinary letters written and mailed by soldiers, sailors and marines assigned to duty outside the continental United States.

Indefinitely extends the law permitting Canadian vessels to carry ore on the Great Lakes.

Liberalizes the Nationality Act of 1940 to permit aliens serving in the armed forces to become citizens without the usual declarations of intention, certificate of arrival and period of residence requirements. The petitioner would not be required to speak English, sign in his own handwriting or meet any educational tests.

Senator Van Nuys, who introduced the bill as the Senate recessed, said Attorney General Biddle will explain need for the manifold provisions of the omnibus measure at the committee hearing Monday.

22 Fires Set

Nazi Ports Suffer Heavy R.A.F. Raids

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Jan. 16.—The Royal Air Force increased both the number of bombers and the bomb load in raiding the German ports of Hamburg and Emden for the second night in succession last night and caused "great destruction" at both places, the British air ministry announced today.

[Heavy bomb bursts in the Calais area tonight indicated the R. A. F. again was pounding German points along the French coast.]

Using two and four engined bombers—Britain's four-motored planes include Halifaxes, Stirlings and Manchesters—the R. A. F. started at least 22 fires at Emden and set fires on the north bank of the Elbe at Hamburg to burn more fiercely than those started the previous night.

The air ministry said that "a strong force" sped to the attack on northwest Germany—a loose term that might mean as many as 200 bombers.

Six bombers failed to return to their bases here, one more than was destroyed Wednesday night.

The air ministry also announced vaguely that "other objectives in northwest Germany and enemy airdromes in the low countries were bombed."

In contrast, the air ministry and ministry of home security reported today, "one enemy bomber was destroyed in a small enemy raid on the northeast coast of England last evening."

Britain also learned with obvious satisfaction tonight that the Axis losses in aircraft since the beginning of the war are twice as great as those suffered by the Royal Air Force. Air ministry figures show the Axis has lost 8574 planes to the R. A. F.'s 3962 in fighting over and around England, over Europe, in the Middle East and on the Western and Scandinavian fronts, at sea and on the Russian front.

Free French Fighting Nazis At Halfaya

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Jan. 16.—Frenchmen were pitted against Germans tonight for the first time since the armistice of June, 1940, as Free French columns of tanks and armored cars rolled up to reinforce the British Eighth Army's siege of the big and staunchly fortified German-Italian position in Hellfire Pass.

Their presence presaged a real offensive to clean out the dangerous threat to the main Libyan supply lines of the British army, advanced forces of which are operating more than 300 miles to the west.

Because there are 7000 enemy troops in the high and rocky pass at Halfya, near the Egyptian border, British supplies have had to make a slow, 100-mile detour.

If this enemy garrison can be mopped up, the supply lines can be shortened and many troops released to advance on Tripoli.

The British forward columns tonight were pushing slowly along the heavily mined lower coast of the Gulf of Sirte, halfway between Hellfire Pass and Tripoli, despite stiff opposition from reinforced German dive-bomber and fighter units and rear-guard stands by the main Axis desert force.

Today's headquarters communique again stressed the considerable enemy air activity which suddenly has developed against these forward troops, but it said adequate British fighter protection kept losses at a minimum.

An R. A. F. communique, reporting offensive operations yesterday from Free French bombings of Halfaya to another British attack on Tripoli, said no British planes were lost.

A German dive-bomber was shot down off Tobruk and another enemy plane crashed into the sea off Bengasi.

Sidelights on the War

Axis Woos Hungary for Help In Planning Spring Offensive

Rome, Jan. 16 (Andi Agency to Associated Press).—Germany and her allies, now on the defensive against Russian assaults, need Hungary's cooperation to prepare for a major spring offensive, Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, declared today.

Occasion for his statement was the visit to Budapest by Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, owner of Il Telegrafo, which followed by a few days the visit there of Germany's foreign minister, Joahim von Ribbentrop.

"From the very first the Axis has placed great faith in Hungary's concrete collaboration," wrote Ansaldo. "Hungary always has constituted an outpost of Europe. It is natural, therefore, that the Axis counts on Hungary.

"The war in Russia has entered a phase of a special character, with Germany on the defensive against heavy Russian assaults," he concluded. "Because of preparations for formidable efforts in the spring, it is necessary that relations with Hungary continue most intimately."

First mention of organized resistance to the Axis in the Balkans came from Virginio Gayda, editor of Il Gornale d'Italia. In an editorial headed "Communist Guerrillas in the Balkans," Gayda declared: "The present fighting (by the Serbs) is in reality the second phase of the Balkan war . . . War against the Balkan guerrillas is a necessary appendix of the war against Russia."

Battleship Jackpot

Nampa, Idaho, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Nampa businessmen tonight tried to interest the Treasury Department in their Axis battleship jackpot.

Members of Nampa's "Sink-a-Battleship" Club contribute 25 cents a week in dues. Each time an Axis battleship goes down a drawing is held and the winner receives defense bonds and stamps equaling the amount of contributions to that date. Then the whole process is repeated.

"There ought to be a club in every town," members said.

Final Action On Allied War Plan Near

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Another climax in the consultations between British and American war strategists appeared near yesterday as the White House indicated that President Roosevelt soon may summon staff experts of both nations for final action on a war operations plan.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early, explaining Mr. Roosevelt's cancellation of his regular press conference and his brief appointment list, told reporters yesterday the President devoted most of the day to "staff papers" setting out the ideas developed in more than three weeks of discussion between British and American strategists.

"The meetings that have been going on for some time are now being reduced to paper," Early said. "The President is working on them now. Dependent on when he finishes his studies, a staff meeting will be called."

The staff meeting may be called for today or tomorrow.

The current phase of consultations, it was believed, may produce an agreement as significant as the United Nations pact and unification of Far Eastern command two weeks ago.

According to some observers here, the present discussions look beyond the immediate defense problem in the Far East, upon which the ABCD powers presumably are already agreed, to America's role in the fighting in Europe and Africa and the general disposition of allied forces between the Atlantic and Pacific for some months to come.

In this connection the most important of the decisions to be reached by the "war council" may be the assignments for the million-man A. E. F. which, Secretary of War Stimson indicated Thursday, might be serving abroad by the end of 1942.

Such decisions, if reached here within the next few days, are naturally not expected to be revealed in any White House announcement but in future communiques from the field.

Early told his press conference yesterday he did not know whether the President's paper work and the coming staff meeting dealt with what a reporter had called "the grand strategy."

Kharkov Under Red Artillery Fire

14 Russian planes were destroyed on Thursday.

Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, the tip of the German central triangle based on Rzhev and Vyazma, also was under Red artillery bombardment as the white-shrouded Siberian ski units moved west of Rzhev and Vyazma in a great pincers movement.

The blasting of Kharkov and Taganrog was an effort to hurl the Nazis back hundreds of miles to the next best defense line along the winding Dnieper River.

"The German armies now are in exactly the same position the Russians were last fall," one military commentator said. "They are on the defensive, trying to protect a 1000-mile front until spring.

"The Russians, holding the initiative, can now hit them where they choose."

Soviet accounts said fresh Siberian troops, aided by local guerrilla bands, were making forced marches by night through snow-covered forests to fall upon German outposts and steadily turn the central front.

These troops trail ski-mounted cannon, mine throwers and supplies, and are only part of a great reservoir of troops trained for just what they have been doing—"encircling and annihilating"—the Russians said.

The announced capture of Selizharovo, 50 miles northwest of Rzhev, in the Valdai foothills, put the Russians on a road leading 200 miles west to the Latvian border, while the southern arm of this pinchers was working toward Smolensk from the Kirov area south of Rzhev.

Further evidence of German anxiety was seen in an Exchange Telegraph pickup of a German radio broadcast announcing a curtailment of railway passenger service in the Reich. This undoubtedly was to speed more men and supplies to the winter-worn Nazis in Russia.

Germany and Italy also were reported working hard to squeeze more aid out of Hungary to reinforce the Russian front. Giovanni Ansaldo, Italian newspaper editor, admitting the Axis was on the defensive in Russia, said that "the Axis counts on Hungary" to aid in a spring offensive. The German high command declared 1300 Russians had been killed Tuesday in a counterattack by a German infantry battalion, but did not name the "important locality" which it said was captured.

The Nazis also said a Russian transport was sunk and two other ships damaged in air attacks near Feodosiya and Kerch, the eastern Crimean ports where the Russians steadily landed more troops for the reconquest of that peninsula.

Man Without a Vichy

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Jan. 16 (AP).—Louis de Benoist, French general agent for the Suez Canal Co., who turned to the De Gaulist cause, was deprived of his nationality today by the Vichy government.

This apparently was the first of the counter moves threatened if the De Gaulists seek to gain control of the French interest in the canal.

Costa Rica Gets Half Million To Start Building Modern Army

The United States yesterday signed a lend-lease agreement with another Latin-American republic and prepared to put up 20 million dollars to aid all the Central American nations in completing their links in the strategic Pan-American Highway.

The lend-lease agreement, which involves a $550,000 loan, was concluded with Costa Rica to enable that nation, bordering Panama to the north, to begin building a modern army.

Costa Rica also is to receive eight million dollars of the highway loan, which was approved yesterday by the Public Works Administration.

Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala and El Salvador will divide the remaining 12 million dollars in order to complete work on their sectors of the projected "land lifeline" from the United States and Mexico to the Canal Zone.

United Front Seen

At the same time these grants were announced officials here were expressing satisfaction over the prospects for emergence of a Pan American "united front" from the Rio de Janeiro Conference of American Foreign Ministers.

Reports of an enthusiastic reception of Undersecretary of State Welles' speech to the conference Thursday and of a modification of Argentina's "isolationist" stand were both seen as improving the chances of a unanimous agreement for rupture of diplomatic and economic relations with the Axis.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday praised the speeches of the Venezuelan, Mexican and Uruguayan foreign ministers before the Rio conference.

Auspicious Opening

In answer to a press conference question he said the speeches showed a broad grasp of the emergency problems facing the Americas and gave the conference an auspicious opening.

He described the lend-lease agreement with Costa Rica as a transaction based on a cooperative relationship, emphasizing the perfect unanimity between the two nations in their efforts to assure hemispheric defense.

Argentina Expected to Make Hemisphere Break With Axis Unanimous

dividual action.

The last opposition to complete American rupture of diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan appeared to have been abandoned earlier in today's session when Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian foreign minister, read to the delegates a message from Acting President Castillo of Argentina declaring his country would fulfill its obligation of solidarity.

"Argentina will stand by the United States and every other American republic in fulfilment of its pledges," the message declared.

The Argentine statement denied the accuracy of press reports which Castillo said had been trying to convince the world that Argentina was "unprepared to carry out its commitments of hemisphere solidarity." He branded all such reports as untrue.

Castillo and the Argentine foreign minister, Dr. Ruiz-Guinazu, had declared prior to the opening of the conference yesterday that Argentina would refuse to take any "pre-belligerent" action against the Axis nations.

But the increasing pressure of other American nations, and the strong statement of America's Sumner Welles to the conference on Thursday, had left Argentina alone in its position. Further pressure had been put on the Argentine government by its own citizens who are reported to be overwhelmingly on the side of the democratic powers in the world conflict.

Meanwhile, it was reported tonight that a program for solution of the 100-year-old border dispute between Ecuador and Peru has been found, and will be presented to the conference. The proposal, said to have been approved by both nations, was developed largely by Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, and Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian foreign minister.

The boundary dispute has been a source of constant strife and occasional warfare between Ecuador and Peru for a century, and Ecuador threatened to boycott the conference unless it is settled.

The conference lost no time in getting down to details and preparing for the steps to follow the breaking off of relations with the Axis nations. Among the several resolutions presented today by the United States delegation was one calling for a committee to coordinate all activities of the 21 American nations in combatting Axis espionage and sabotage.

Described as a "Pan-American Dies Committee," this body would operate under broad powers, including the detention of dangerous Axis nationals resident in the Americas, restriction of travel for all Axis nationals and the withdrawal of citizenship from any persons engaged in activities favoring or benefiting the Axis.

The United States resolution also asked that telephonic, wire or radio communication with Axis territory be prohibited by all American nations, or at least so controlled as to prevent any use of these communications to aid the Axis or endanger American security.

It provided also that no Axis national be permitted to own or operate planes within the Americas.

To organize and administer these provisions of security, the resolution recommended that the the conference delegate to the existing "neutrality committee," appointed by an earlier conference, power to set up committees of experts functioning permanently in Rio de Janeiro. This subcommittee would draft legislation and plans to carry out all actions approved by the conference.

Introduction of the resolution calling for rupture of relations with the Axis was believed to have made certain that the more stringent program, supported by Santo Domingo and Central American and Caribbean nations—calling for outright war declarations—would not be put before the conference.

But the position of those nations, which have already have declared war on one or more of the Axis powers, will be established in preambles to the Colombian resolution's final draft.

Soviet Women Paratroops Aid In Disintegration of Germans

By the United Press

Kuibyshev, Jan. 16.—Soviet parachutists, including white-clad and heavily armed women, have wrought "total disintegration" among some German units on the Moscow front by attacking them from the rear as they reeled before violent frontal assaults, the official army organ Red Star reported tonight.

Supported by guerrilla bands, the parachutists have so frayed the organization of the Germans that in some cases contact between troops and commanders is "a total loss," the army publication said.

Red Star cited one case where parachutists and guerillas captured a town and superintended burial of the German garrison, which had been isolated and slain almost to a man while waiting for regular Soviet forces to come up.

Press pictures of the parachutists engaged in the Moscow operations showed two young women wearing flowing white cowls and grasping heavy automatic rifles.

Reports from the Mozhaisk sector, Red Star said, indicate the Germans are making a fairly orderly withdrawal westward from the "shrinking" pocket centered some 60 miles west of the capital. The Germans were reported to be covering their rear with forced labor battalions made up of local males.

Dispatches from another sector of the Moscow Front reported that the Russians have broken through the German fortified zones and are making deep inroads into enemy positions, Red Star said.

Military sources explained that the Russians were able to reduce German defense works rapidly in this zone because the Germans lacked the fire to cover succeeding positions as they withdrew.

THE LIFE STORY OF AMERICA'S FIRST HERO IN THE WAR WITH JAPAN

Capt. Colin Kelly

He dropped three bombs on the Japanese battleship Haruna and sank it. Jap fighter planes set his bomber afire as he attempted to return to his base. Calmly he ordered his crew of six to bail out. And then Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr., last to leave his plane, died in the crash. "I am proud of him," said his young widow. "He was an officer in every sense of the word." America is proud of him, too, proud and interested. So Carol Frink spent three weeks with Mrs. Kelly and with young Corkey to learn directly from family and friends the story of a hero's life. And tomorrow The Washington Post brings you the first installment of that story.

Henderson Opposes New Tires for Taxis

the list of eligible vehicles as issued by the Office of Production Management with the approval of the President," he declared.

"It may well be that the functions performed by the taxicabs in the District of Columbia are of great importance to the community and the Nation. That, however, is not a decisive question. The question is what are the most important and fundamental uses which must be continued with our sharply limited supply of tires.

Asserts Shortage Is Critical

"The rubber shortage is critical. The problem of allocation of competing needs requires careful study before it can be safely resolved. The problem can not be treated by treating the needs of different classes of users separately. The merits of one class of consumer must be weighed against those of another.

"We cannot say in the abstract that all taxis, or even all District taxis, should get tires unless we are prepared to say that other consumers are less meritorious than taxis and should not get the tires."

The District taxi problem set the price administrator's sights for a long-range view at the national rubber tire picture, and he declared:

"If the Congress should attempt to treat the problem of examining the merits of the claims of taxicabs in the District, then there will appear thousands of others, whose claims are meritorious, clamoring for a hearing. They would be entitled to a hearing. They would have a grievance if taxicabs were given a hearing and allowed tires and they were not."

"Will Pinch More and More"

He warned that the shortage of rubber "will pinch more and more" and the persons seeking tires "may run into the hundreds of thousands and millions."

Meanwhile, taxicabs will not stop running, he forecast. Many months of use remain and many owners have reserve stocks, he said.

John H. Royer, president of the District Association of Taxicab Owners, estimated, however, that approximately 1700 of the District's 4500 cabs will have to stop operating in 30 days unless they obtain new tires.

Under cross-questioning by Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, he admitted that his estimate was based on the needs of his own company, which owns only one-twelfth of the local cabs.

Proposes Four-Point Program

Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin prefaced a four-point program for maintaining taxis as an integral part of the District's transportation system with the remark that "if what we have suggested would detract from national defense, we would withdraw our request."

The proposed program would:

1. Place taxis on a two-shift basis as being "more efficient."
2. Require all companies to cooperate on all call stands.
3. Make taxis always available at all points of passenger concentration.
4. Establish a pick-up service whereby up to four different individuals might be carried to the same destination.

Rep. Schulte Differs

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, crossed with the Price Administrator's views, picturing the Nation's Capital as being unique in the defense set-up and maintaining that taxis are essential to facilitating transportation here.

"We have the most damnable system of transportation in the country," he exclaimed. "Riding the Burma Road is a pleasure compared to riding streetcars in Washington."

Stating that the Capital Transit Co. has ordered 500 new vehicles, he cried, "My God, Mr. Henderson, if they add 500 streetcars and buses to what they've got you won't be able to get through traffic even on your bicycle."

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer told the committee that Washington depends on taxis more than does any other city. The desirability of keeping taxis running also was emphasized by B. R. Tolson, manager of the Washington Terminal Co.

Nelson Is Given Full Authority

President Wilson to Bernard Baruch in World War I and as being in no way inferior to those held by Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's minister of supply. A further indication of his status was the disclosure that he attended the Cabinet meeting yesterday and would sit in future sessions.

Yesterday's order, in which Nelson admittedly was allowed to "write his own ticket," abolishes the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board but reconstitutes its former members into a War Production Board, with Nelson as chairman. In the chairman alone, however, is vested authority; the other members are to advise and assist him.

Among the most sensational grants of authority in the order is one which gives Nelson the controlling and uncontroverted word over the placements of all war contracts—a power hitherto held by the Undersecretaries of the War and Navy. In addition, the Army and Navy Munitions Board is required to report to the President through Nelson.

Big Job for Knudsen

It gives Nelson complete control of the OPM, ordering him to supervise it and "direct such changes in its organization as he may deem necessary." Finally, it gives Nelson full power over purchasing, contracting, specifications and construction, and even over the industrial financing field, a jurisdiction over which Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones previously held complete sway.

Knudsen's appointment as the War Department's ace "trouble-shooter" will give him, according to the White House statement, "entire charge of directing and expediting the gigantic production involved in the War Department munitions program, with special emphasis on the production of airplanes, tanks, guns and ammunition."

This shift was seen as fitting in with the intensified program which Nelson is expected to get under way in the first instance by reorganizing the procurement methods and the placements of contracts.

From this point, it is expected that Knudsen, who rates as the country's most outstanding production genius and commands exceptional devotion from the Nation's factory-production men, will stimulate the actual fabrication of munitions. It was announced that he and his staff would visit the major production factories to help them "speed up their lines of production."

Presidential Tribute

In announcing the appointment, the President said:

"Bill Knudsen is one of the great production men of the world and his acceptance of this new post means that he can give his entire time to the direction and expediting of production, a field in which he has no equal.

"The country is already immeasurably indebted to Mr. Knudsen and in accepting this assignment at my request, he is undertaking one of the most important tasks of the war.

"He will, of course, continue as a member of the new War Production Board."

It was not immediately clear who would succeed to Knudsen's post as director general of OPM. Several of Nelson's principal assistants were reported yesterday as working on the reorganization of the OPM structure, with the possibility indicated of a major reshuffling, particularly of the production division, which was Knudsen's primary responsibility.

It was reported that this division, along with the contract distribution division, might be merged. The director of the latter unit, Floyd B. Odlum, New York investment trust operator, will probably not remain in his present position.

Yesterday's executive order was seen as establishing a full-fledged, all-powerful ministry of supply, even though it left in its present hands—the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and other procurement agencies—the actual placement of war contracts. This omission was known to be at Nelson's own request. He is said to have considered the idea and rejected it as tending to cause delay if a new agency were set up to take over the routine and day-by-day work of putting out contracts.

Instead, the order gives Nelson full control over the procedure without shifting the actual work from those procurement officers who have been conducting it in the past.

Since the intent of granting to one man the complete direction of the war production program is to remedy past failure in full utilization of America's plant equipment, it was taken for granted that Nelson's first job would be to effect an over-all program of contracting, speeding up the flow of contract placement and spreading it to fields not now participating to maximum advantage in the war effort.

In doing this, Nelson's aides forecast, the new production czar will probably follow a technique he developed successfully when he was OPM purchases director and which was used in the Army Quartermaster Corps.

The method is one of "infiltration," in which civilian technical experts and engineers, responsible to OPM and Nelson, will sit with the planning and procurement officers of the Army and Navy, and jointly work out contracting policies, or individual orders themselves, in conformance with the over-all plan developed higher up by Nelson and the War Production Board.

In the event a conflict should develop by this method, the authority granted in the executive order is clear: Nelson "shall issue such directives . . . as he may deem necessary or appropriate," and the several agencies "shall comply."

The tremendous job facing the new production boss has already been outlined in President Roosevelt's message to Congress on January 6. In brief, it calls for the devotion of one-half the Nation's annual income, about 50 billion dollars a year, to war work. This implies a flow of war contracts from the armed services at a much swifter rate than heretofore, and the inclusion of 10 million more workers and untold thousands of existing factories which formerly turned out peacetime articles.

The War Production Board setup, with Nelson in sole charge, is the closest approximation in the defense program to date of the system which finally emerged out of World War I.

Like the present agency, the War Industries Board was advisory to Bernard Baruch, its chairman, whose ultimate determinations, even as Nelson's, were "final." Although Baruch was given power to "determine," he was told by President Wilson to interfere as little as possible with procurement practices. Nelson, on the other hand, is given implicit instructions to revamp them.

In general, the delegation of power to Nelson is far more direct and boldly stated than that to Baruch, a reading of Baruch's instructions discloses.

Text of Order Creating War Production Board

EXECUTIVE ORDER

Establishing the War Production Board in the Executive Office of the President and Defining its Functions and Duties

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and statutes of the United States, as President of the United States and Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and in order to define further the functions and duties of the Office for Emergency Management with respect to the state of war declared to exist by Joint Resolutions of the Congress, approved December 8, 1941, and December 11, 1941, respectively, and for the purpose of assuring the most effective prosecution of war procurement and production, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. There is established within the Office for Emergency Management of the Executive Office of the President a War Production Board, hereinafter referred to as the Board. The Board shall consist of a chairman, to be appointed by the President, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Federal Loan Administrator, the director general and the associate director of the Office of Production Management, the Administrator of the Office of Price Administration, the chairman of the Board of Economic Warfare, and the special assistant to the President supervising the defense aid program.

2. The chairman of the War Production Board, with the advice and assistance of the members of the board, shall:

a. Exercise general direction over the war procurement and production program.

b. Determine the policies, plans, procedures, and methods of the several Federal departments, establishments, and agencies in respect to war procurement and production, including purchasing, contracting, specifications and construction; and including conversion, requisitioning, plant expansion, and the financing thereof; and issues such directives in respect thereto as he may deem necessary or appropriate.

c. Perform the functions and exercise the powers vested in the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board by Executive Order No. 8875, of August 28, 1941.

d. Supervise the Office of Production Management in the performance of its responsibilities and duties, and direct such changes in its organization as he may deem necessary.

e. Report from time to time to the President on the progress of war procurement and production; and perform such other duties as the President may direct.

3. Federal departments, establishments and agencies shall comply with the policies, plans, methods and procedures in respect to war procurement and production as determined by the chairman; and shall furnish to the chairman such information relating to war procurement and production as he may deem necessary for the performance of his duties.

4. The Army and Navy Munitions Board shall report to the President through the chairman of the War Production Board.

5. The chairman may exercise the powers, authority and discretion conferred upon him by this order through such officials or agencies and in such manner as he may determine; and his decisions shall be final.

6. The chairman is further authorized within the limits of such funds as may be allocated or appropriated to the board to employ necessary personnel and make provision for necessary supplies, facilities and services.

7. The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, established by the Executive Order of August 28, 1941, is hereby abolished, and its personnel, records and property transferred to the board. The Executive Orders No. 8629 of January 7, 1941; No. 8875 of August 28, 1941; No. 8891 of September 4, 1941; No. 8942 of November 19, 1941; No. 9001 of December 27, 1941, and No. 9023 of January 14, 1942, are hereby amended accordingly, and any provisions of these or other pertinent Executive Orders conflicting with this order are hereby superseded.

Book Drive Nets 4200 Volumes

More than 4200 books had been collected yesterday in the "Books for Buddies" campaign. The goal is 100,000, with the books to be used by men in the services.

Persons wanting to give books may take them to one of the public library branches, to one of the District Grocery Stores, Inc., stores, to the George Washington University library or to a Catholic parochial school, Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, chairman of the campaign, said.

Air Raid Siren Gets Test Today

F. Freeland Chew, chief air raid warden for Arlington County, last night announced the testing of a five-horsepower siren prior to placing orders for five to give adequate warning of any air raid. The test will be made today at 3 p. m. at the Arnold Bus Co. terminal, Wilson Boulevard and North Randolph Street.

Following the testing of the siren a steam whistle will be tested as an auxiliary alarm at the Gene Laundry plant, North Fifth and Randolph Streets.

Price Control License Plan Is Approved

A House and Senate conference committee on the price control bill yesterday reached a tentative agreemnet on licensing as a means of enforcing price controls.

Conferees passed over a vote on major controversial provisions, including farm price controls, but House conferees indicated they would accept the Senate licensing provision.

Although the conference committee was called back today into Saturday session, no showdown on the farm price dispute was expected until next week, and Chairman Brown of the Senate conferees, said a final vote on a report will not come until Tuesday.

Although the House rejected licensing as a means of price enforcement, the Senate provision was greatly moderated and apparently will be accepted without a fight. Originally the price administrator would have been given broad powers to revoke licenses of violators, but in its present form licenses could only be withdrawn by State or Federal courts, after a first violation and a warning by the administrator.

Overshadowing other controversial features of the bill, the Administration's fight to eliminate the O'Mahoney farm amendment, including industrial wages as a parity price factor, is the most crucial decision remaining. Should the amendment be retained, the President may veto the bill. A compromise was still expected, eliminating the O'Mahoney amendment but retaining in modified form the Bankhead amendment giving the Secretary of Agriculture a veto power over farm price orders of the price administrator.

Our Fleet Is Out Hunting

overhead in precise formations. Hours later, their searching done, they fly back to their majestic floating base.

Fighting or not, there is something to keep everybody busy around the clock beginning with "general quarters" before dawn when every man must be at his battle station. Guns, of course, are manned all night, but "general quarters" is for all hands.

The hours seem long with ceaseless watching and the complex work of keeping the ship constantly in fighting trim. Even the mildest form of excitement is welcome—such as taking an appendicitis patient aboard from a destroyer.

Scattered among our suntanned crew are scores of men whose ships were torpedoed from under them at Pearl Harbor, in the Japanese attack of December 7. Don't make the mistake of thinking that they are downhearted. They're eating like horses—a sure sign they are full of fight.

Most of the activity is drill, but a keen sense that this is the "real thing" nevertheless pervades the ship. It isn't just practice any more. Any time, a periscope might stab the white-flecked blue water for just the necessary instant. High in the lookout posts sharp eyes are watching, each man assigned to a certain sector—his own "piece of pie."

If one of the lookouts sees something, he shouts. Word goes by telephone to the bridge and gun directors. So far, they've shouted nothing big, but there is bound to come a time when they will.

We were finishing luncheon the other day when our guns roared without warning and we hit the deck like cats. The gunners thought they saw a periscope—maybe they did—and that was not time for haggling.

The gunners' itchy trigger fingers make it tough on the whales because their big, dark shadows often resemble submarines. One officer smilingly referred to our sea force as a "highpowered branch of the whaling industry."

Hence the question "when is a whale a submarine?" Another officer answered it this way:

"When you see a whale with a conning tower and a gun, its no longer a whale."

Judge Busy, Viereck Trial Faces Delay

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday discovered two important motions standing in the way of the early trial he has ordered in the District Court for George Sylvester Viereck, German agent accused of concealing his propaganda use of Congressmen and their franks.

The trial cannot proceed next Wednesday, as Goldsborough wished, unless the motions are disposed of first.

The Viereck trial was scheduled for February 2, until Thursday, when Goldsborough sent for Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., and ordered them to be ready next Monday. They had just finished another long case.

When they asked what the hurry was, the prosecutors said, Goldsborough replied that he did not want the trial interfering with an anti-trust case he plans to hear for several months, starting the first week of next month. When the prosecutors suggested that one of the ten other District justices might try Viereck, they said, Goldsborough answered that he was determined to hear the case himself.

Despite their protests that the interests of the Government might be injured, the prosecutors said, Goldsborough then gave them two more days and ordered them to open the case next Wednesday.

It developed yesterday that Viereck's counsel have moved both for a bill of particulars and to suppress evidence seized when Federal agents arrested Viereck in his luxurious New York apartment. Goldsborough suggested to the prosecutors that they argue these motions on Monday. Maloney replied that the motions were too important to be settled on such short notice. The discussion ended without agreement on any date for the motions to be heard.

The special grand jury on Axis agents, which indicted Viereck, will meet Monday to resume its questioning of Prescott Dennett, Viereck's aide here in the mailing of propaganda under Congressional frank.

Meanwhile, George Hill, 45, Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, who was convicted of perjury before Justice F. Dickinson Letts Thursday, remained in the District Jail pending sentence, which will not be imposed until his application for a new trial is heard.

Censors Curb Quiz Programs on Radio

announcers were asked to make no mention of the weather.

Weather reports in general will be severely curtailed, being restricted to information approved by the Weather Bureau specifically for broadcasts.

Ryan to Administer Code

Even the birthday party announcements traditional with many stations will have to be stopped unless the listener who is advised to "look under the chair" or "on the mantel" for a surprise is known to the broadcaster.

Price announced that J. H. Ryan, of Toledo, Ohio, assistant director of censorship, would administer the radio code.

Broadcasters themselves were prepared for the curbs in yesterday's code of practices. They said they had been carefully monitoring, knowing from long experience that use of standard programs for secret communications is an old gag. One broadcaster here, for instance, recalled that in prohibition days in Florida, "Comin' Through the Rye," played at the request of unknown listeners, meant "the Coast Guard is coming." Another pointed out that a Midwestern station several years ago clamped down on its musical request programs because it was suspected the underworld was using it for transmitting messages.

Price pointed out that "certain material which may appear on the news service wires as approved for newspapers may not be appropriate for radio." This, he said, was due to the fact that printed matter may be stopped at the borders, while matter broadcast by radio undergoes no secondary censorship and, once uttered, cannot be recalled.

Additional Regulations

In addition to all restrictions which the press has been asked to observe, radio was asked to submit to certain specific regulations applicable to itself alone.

In addition to quiz programs in which participants are not investigated before the broadcast, radio was asked to eliminate man-in-the-street interviews and interviews at airports and train terminals.

The code asked discontinuance of fulfilling requests to call mass meetings or to make emergency announcements, except when such requests come from official sources.

The code asks withholding from the air reports of information from unidentified sources as to ship sinkings, or reverses or successes of land forces.

Price advised radio to "steer clear of dramatic programs which attempt to portray the horrors of combat; to avoid sound effects which might be mistaken for air-raid alarms."

Ford Will Suspend Sunday Radio Hour

Noted conductors, instrumentalists and singers have appeared on this program, which weekly draws a studio audience of 5000.

No reason was assigned by the company for its suspension.

Reynolds Launches Inquiry On Army Promotions

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday ordered investigation of Presidential nominations for Army advancement in response to charges that some officers associated with bungling, waste and profiteering in the production of munitions had been promoted.

Chairman Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, acting on instructions from the committee, named a special subcommittee to "examine more closely" into Army promotion recommendations.

In the first Administration reply to the Truman committee's revelations Thursday of fumbling and enormous profits in war production, Undersecretary of War Patterson last night declared that since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, December 7, the War Department and automobile industry have agreed on terms for production of three and a half billion dollars' worth of military supplies and equipment.

Apparently reacting to the committee's criticism of policies which permitted the automobile industry to keep on making cars instead of converting to military production, Patterson declared "these tremendous orders" could never have been arranged without cooperation of OPM, and the fact that the War Department, "in consultation with the automotive industry," has been preparing "20 years" for the emergency.

In Detroit, the Ford Motor Co. called the committee's criticism "absurd."

Appointment of the Military Affairs Subcommittee appeared to end the Senate practice of wholesale confirmation of War Department nominations.

Reynolds named to the subcommittee Senators Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman; Kilgore (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Holman (Republican), of Oregon. Shortly afterward, President Roosevelt asked the Senate to confirm 156 Air Corps officers for advancement to the rank of colonel.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee meanwhile threatened to make public names of persons involved in widespread granting of "privilege" commissions to young men of draft age who, by waiver of requirements for their grade, are accepted for duty in noncombatant branches of the service.

The threat was made in a committee publication listing various service requirements, in which it reiterated the recent warning of Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, the chairman, that Congress may find it necessary to investigate the system of granting waivers in the Army and Navy.

In the House, Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee Investigating Defense Expenditures, promised "preliminary investigation" of a charge that Lieut. Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, a Democrat, sought employment by a Michigan manufacturer in the company's negotiations for a 24-million-dollar War Department contract.

The charge, linking the Michigan State official with "defense broker" activities which the committee has been investigating, was made by Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan.

Engel said Murphy is not related to Associate Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy.

The Truman committee which, Senate leaders indicated, will be authorized to spend an additional $100,000 to continue its investigations, is expected shortly to make a thorough inquiry into activities of OPM's dollar-a-year men whom its report Thursday called big-business "lobbyists in a very real sense."

The Naval Affairs Committee of the House next week, probably Tuesday, will make public results of months of intensive study of profiteering in naval contracts.

Members of Congress have been subjected to pressure, increasingly since the outbreak of war, to use their influence to assist applicants in obtaining commissions despite inability to meet age, educational or physical requirements of the Navy. Most popular branch of the naval service, judging from the number of applicants "lacking all the qualifications," is the Naval Intelligence, the Senate Naval Committee observed.

The committee found "particularly" objectionable cases where "waivers have been granted to persons who are within the draft or military age . . . to evade actual combat service." Applications for waivers for combat service are "invariably disapproved," it was observed.

Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine, a Naval Committee member, declared that young men from families "with a lot of influence and a lot of money" have been able to obtain commissions while other men, some of them less advantageously situated, are serving in the ranks.

Brewster, whose son is a private, attacked "this display of privilege" as the sort of thing that "germinates" communism.

Laura Ingalls Denies Guilt; Trial Feb. 9

Laura Ingalls, plump little aviatrix, who is accused of being a secret agent of the German government, will go on trial in District Court here on February 9.

The date was set yesterday by Justice James W. Morris after Miss Ingalls had pleaded innocent when arraigned a few moments earlier before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

Registering her assertion of "not guilty" in a firm and indignant tone, the 38-year-old flier had evidently regained since her last appearance some of the verve and cockiness for which she was noted when blazing records across the skylanes.

Dressed in a broad-brimmed gray hat and brown coat, she joked with photographers waiting to follow her out of the courthouse, and asked her attorney, James F. Reilly, whether he considered himself photogenic enough to be pictured with her.

She is represented by both Reilly and William J. Hughes, jr., though only Reilly appeared in court with her yesterday. He refused to comment on the outcome of Miss Ingalls' reported previous request for permission to plead "nollo contendere"—no defense—to the charges against her.

Justice Goldsborough, after entering her plea of not guilty, told attorneys that the case was in Justice Morris' charge from then on, and the case will be tried before him.

The Government alleges that Miss Ingalls received money from representatives of the Third Reich for delivering speeches and distributing printed matter favorable to the Nazi cause, but failed to register with the State Department as a German agent.

She is now free under $7500 bond.

Communist Beliefs No Bar to Citizenship, Willkie Contends

By the Associated Press

Wendell L. Willkie asserted in a brief filed yesterday with the Supreme Court that active membership in the Communist Party or belief in the principles of the organization was not sufficient grounds for denial of American citizenship.

The 1940 Republican Presidential nominee urged the tribunal to reverse a decision of the Ninth Federal Circuit Court ordering cancellation of the citizenship of William Schneiderman, State secretary of the Communist Party for California and a native of Rumanov, Russia.

Oral arguments on the litigation, involving whether Communist membership prevents allegiance to the United States Government, will be heard by the Supreme Court early next month.

"Congress alone," Willkie contended, "has the power to specify the prerequisites of naturalization and to date has not specified active membership in the Communist Party or belief in the principles thereof, as enunciated in its Constitution, as a ground for denial of citizenship."

Willkie asserted also that the circuit court decision "constitutes a drastic abridgment of freedom of political belief and thought, of free speech and freedom of the press."

Schneiderman's American citizenship was ordered cancelled by the Federal District Court at San Francisco on the ground that membership in the Communist Party had been concealed. Cancellation was ordered in 1940, which was 13 years after Schneiderman had been naturalized and 32 years after he came to this country at the age of three.

The district court held that Schneiderman had obtained citizenship illegally because he failed to reveal that during a five-year probationary period he belonged to an organization advocating overthrow of the Government by violence.

Willkie asserted that "free institutions can only be preserved by free expression of the popular will, and an oath to support the Constitution and the laws of the United States imports no more than a willing obedience to them while in force."

"Advocacy of change therein in a lawful manner does not import lack of attachment to the Constitution," the brief said, "nor does it mean that the applicant swears falsely when he takes an oath to support and defend the Constitution. . . ."

Ship Which Sank Nazi Sub Considered Lost

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—The admiralty announced today that the trawler Lady Shirley which sank the German submarine U-111 on October 4 is overdue and considered lost.

The Lady Shirley is credited with sinking the U-boat in a dramatic, fast-firing fight against what the admiralty termed "a larger and better-equipped adversary."

Several 4-inch shells from the trawler disabled the submarine after it had been forced to the surface by depth bombs, and the German crew abandoned the ship just before it sank. Forty-four of the German seamen were taken aboard the trawler as prisoners.

"JESUS, SAVIOUR, PILOT ME"
— — — REV. EDWARD HOPPER — — —

Jesus, Saviour, pilot me
Over life's tempestuous sea,
Unknown waves before me roll,
Hiding rock and treacherous shoal;
Chart and compass come from Thee,
Jesus, Saviour, pilot me!

This mariner's hymn has for long years appealed to the hearts of singing seamen wherever they may be. It was written by Rev. Hopper while pastor of the Mariner's Church at New York harbor — "The Church of the Sea and Land."

School of Law Sponsors Legal Mass Sunday

With members of the United States Supreme Court and subordinate courts, the Cabinet and diplomatic corps and members of both branches of the Congress among the invited guests, the annual "Red Mass," traditionally associated with the opening of the courts and legislative bodies of Europe, will be solemnized in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Invitations to the colorful ceremony, which is known in the Church as the Solemn Votive Mass of the Holy Spirit, were issued on behalf of the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington and Chancellor of the University, the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Rector of the University and the faculty of the University's School of Law; the Very Rev. Robert J. White, dean.

Father White will be celebrant of the Mass. The sermon will be delivered by Bishop Corrigan. The Rev. John P. Maher, O. S. A., and the Rev. Ralph V. Shuhler, O. S. A., of the Augustinian College, will serve as deacon and subdeacon respectively. The master of ceremonies will be the Rev. William J. Lallou, associate professor of sacred liturgy of the School of Theology, assisted by the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., professor of liturgy, of the University's Theological College. The music of the Mass will be sung by a choir composed of seminarians from the Augustinian College and the Sulpician Seminary.

Church Windows Will Be Dedicated To Loyal Workers

Honoring loyal church workers of the past, three memorial stained glass windows will be dedicated tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Grace Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Varnum Streets Northwest.

The altar window will honor the memory of the congregation's first two pastors—the Rev. E. G. Tressel, who served from 1877 to 1892, and the Rev. J. E. A. Doerman, pastor from 1893 to 1919.

Another window will memoralize John Robert Haislip, for many years a local building contractor, who died in 1922, and his wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Haislip, who died in 1940. It will be called the St. John Window. A small aisle window will honor the memory of Mrs. Ida Mae Green, former president of the Fidelity Club for Young Women, who died in 1939.

The Rev. Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor, will conduct the dedication services.

Church Forms Class For Defense Workers

All civilian defense workers in the Bloomingdale area are urged to join the additional class in first aid, canteen cooking and administration that is being formed, meeting in the parish hall of Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capital Street and Rhode Island Avenue. The Atonement Red Cross sewing class meets Wednesday from 1 a. m. to 4 p. m.

'Channels of Blessing' Pastor's Sermon Theme

"Channels of Blessing" will be the subject of the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of The Church of Two Worlds, tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, sopano, will be the soloist. There will be a lecture by the minister, followed by a message service, at the Wednesday evening meeting.

Emory Church to Hear Lyric Dramatic Tenor

Eivin Bjornstad, lyric dramatic tenor of Oslo, Norway, will sing on Tuesday at 8 p. m. at Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia Avenue Northwest, during the meeting of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association. Vice President Howard M. Stackhouse will preside.

Guest Bible Teacher

Mrs. J. B. Calkins, of Clarendon, Va., will be the guest teacher of the Burrall Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. Mrs. Calkins is a sister of Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the University of Chicago Chapel and of James Gordon Gilkey, Congregationalist minister in Springfield, Mass.

Effective Living To Be Stressed In YWCA Courses

A weekly school of "effective living" will be launched Tuesday at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, under the guidance of the Rev. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

It is designed "to make some contribution in the interest of sane living and thinking in these troubled times," according to Dr. Fendrich.

A class in mental hygiene will be held from 9:30 to 10:15 a. m.; one in Scriptual psychology from 10:30 to 11:15 a. m., and a class in effective living from 11:30 to 12:15 p. m. Each course is 12 weeks long.

Cathedral Rite To Be Held for Kin of Soldiers

A service for the relatives of the soldiers of Washington now on active duty in various parts of the country, and taking the place of the annual National Guard memorial service, will be held at the Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 3:30 p. m., according to final plans completed by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox. He is commanding general of the district of Washington, as well as the commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard.

A special invitation is extended to all the relatives and friends not only of National Guardsmen, but also of Selective Service men and other men from the District of Columbia who are on active duty.

Gen. Cox and his staff will be in the procession with the Bishop of Washington and the members of the cathedral staff. The services will be conducted by the Very Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, dean of the cathedral. Canon W. Curtis Draper will open the service and read the psalm. The sermon will be preached by Col. John Chauncey Walcott Linsley, present chief chaplain at Fort Myer. The office of the Chief of Chaplains of the United States Army will be represented by Lieut. Col. Walter B. Zimmerman and Lieut. Col. Harry L. Virden.

The 121st Engineer Band, of Washington's own Engineer regiment, will come from Fort George G. Meade to play during the service. The colors of the District of Columbia, as well as those of the District of Columbia National Guard, will be in the procession.

Labor Board Is Organized For War Job

By the United Press

The National War Labor Board last night pledged to President Roosevelt its full responsibility for assuring maximum war production "without interruption until victory is achieved."

In a resolution transmitted to the White House following their first meeting, members assured the Chief Executive that all war industry-labor disputes would be "peacefully, fairly and finally settled."

To achieve uninterrupted production in war industries, the board announced, its members will be held in reserve to determine the stubborn disputes which cannot be settled by mediation or voluntary arbitration. The board will appoint associate members to handle initial mediation of disputes.

It also was resolved that public members will be on duty "full time" and industry and labor members—or their alternates—will be "on call."

Gets First Dispute

"The board members will not, at least for the time being, participate in mediation," an announcement said.

The resolution transmitted to the President read:

"The members of the War Labor Board assembled for the board's first meeting on January 16, 1942, hereby resolves to discharge to the best of their ability the responsibilities which have been placed upon them to the end that labor disputes may peacefully, fairly and finally be settled, and that maximum war production may continue without interruption until victory is achieved."

In its first action, the board referred to its labor members for adjustment the dispute involving the Los Angeles Railway Corporation and the Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (A. F. L.), the Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.) and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Umpires Not Named

The C. I. O. union claimed that several of its members had been discharged for failure to join the A. F. L. union, which has a closed shop contract with the company. An estimated 3500 workers are involved.

The board appointed Chairman William H. Davis, Vice Chairman George W. Taylor, Roger D. Lapham, Walter Teagle, Thomas Kennedy and Matthew Woll to a committee on organization and procedure.

There will be no appointment of arbitrators or umpires at this time, it was said. Wendell L. Willkie, James A. Farley, Alfred E. Smith, Charles Evans Hughes and others of national prominence have been suggested as umpires.

The United Mine Workers Journal, C. I. O. publication, criticized President Roosevelt's appointment of Davis to head the War Labor Board. The journal said Davis and others on the old National Defense Mediation Board had been guilty of "asinine reasoning and conclusions" in the captive coal mines strikes last fall.

Labor, a publication of the railroad brotherhoods, applauded President Roosevelt's action in giving the War Labor Board full authority to settle all disputes, including those involving the closed shop issue.

Catholics Open Mission Drive Tomorrow

Formally launching the Washington and Baltimore Archdioceses' part in the home and foreign missionary drive of the National Society for the Propagation of the Faith, "Catholic Mission Sunday" will be celebrated in local and nearby parishes tomorrow.

Twenty-nine priests will exchange pulpits in this area, preaching missionary themes at all masses. The churches and their guest priests follow:

Chaplains Needed For Service With Army Divisions

An S. O. S. has just been sent out to American Protestantism for more chaplains for our armed forces. The S. O. S. was sent by Director S. Arthur Devan, of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains. It was sent to leaders of the 30 larger Protestant denominations which the commission represents, urging them to release the best of their younger clergymen for this service.

Navy Receives Mansion as War Building

The stately, Larz Anderson House, 2118 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, scene of great functions, and receptions for royalty and other great people, has been turned over to the Navy Department as a gift for the duration of the war.

The gift was made by the present occupants, the Society of the Cincinnati, patriotic organization founded by officers of the American Revolution in 1789, including George Washington. The Navy accepted the offer and is expected to move in within a few days. Valuable objects of art and furniture will be stored, Maj. Percy Blair, curator of the mansion, said.

"The offer was made solely as a patriotic gesture," Maj. Blair said. "No compensation will be asked of the Navy for its use."

The house was formerly the residence of the late Col. Larz Anderson and his wife, who turned it over to the Society of Cincinnati in 1939 as a home and museum. Col. Anderson, former Ambassador to Japan and Minister to Belgium, made the mansion a showplace. He adorned it with priceless tapestries, canvasses by Hoppner, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Lely and Sir Thomas Lawrence. There was a sumptuous ballroom with ceilings supported by fluted Viennese marble columns; treasures from China, South America, Russia (and Jajan); Gothic choir stalls and a pulpit.

Sparkling functions were held there. The Belgium war mission, Gen. Foch, then military hero of France; the King and Queen of Siam, the Duke d'Abruzzi, brother of the King of Italy, and many other famous international personages were entertained there.

The mansion was opened to the public for the first time in May, 1940, whren members of the society gave a reception and tea. Proceeds went toward the fund in this country for the foundation of canteens for French soldiers then fighting the battle of France. The organization was known as Defense Contre Avions, of which Mrs. Anderson was American chairman.

The house was built with the intention that it should eventually be the home of the Cincinnati, as Col. Anderson was a descendant of an original member.

But at the time Col. Anderson probably did not suspect that the mansion would one day be used by this Government in a war against Japan—the nation to which he was once assigned as United States Ambassador.

Sixteenth Street Unit Sets Up Headquarters

Office headquarters for the Sixteenth Street Highlands Defense Area have been set up at the Sixth Precinct Police Station, Nicholson Street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest, Mrs. Joseph Low, publicity chairman, announced last night.

Volunteers on four-hour shifts are staffing the office and keeping it operating about 20 hours a day, Mrs. Low said.

350 Groups Needed for Feeding Plan

"Too many cooks won't spoil the broth" as far as the civilian defense emergency feeding organization is concerned, Miss Mary Mason, its chief, told a meeting of 80 emergency feeding unit chairmen in the District Building last night.

Miss Mason told the group that the 80 units already set up must be expanded to 350 before the organization can be considered complete. From 10 to 20 volunteers are needed to staff each unit, she said.

Col. Lemuel L. Bolles, District civilian defense director, praised the group for having made excellent organization progress since the start of the emergency.

Miss Mason disclosed that District grocers had agreed to supply enough food to staff 100 of the emergency units. Enough food to provide emergency feeding rations for 500 persons will be sent to each unit eventually, Miss Mason said.

Others who spoke included Dr. John Reed, chief of emergency medical service; Aaron Levin and Nat Goldberg, representing local grocers; Clement Murphy, chief air-raid warden; Randolph Bishop, emergency housing; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Sergt. B. F. McAllister, chief clerk of District civilian defense; Horace Walker, secretary of "Salvage for Victory" program.

Area Chairman Does Her Own Recruiting

Mrs. David A. Pine, wife of the District Court justice and chairman of the first-aid committee for the Sixteenth Street Highlands Defense Area, is not permitting a shortage of instructors to hold back her training program.

She is conducting her own survey of doctors in the area and recruiting all who might be able to give first-aid instruction in their spare time. Also, her committee has been able to find a number of nurses in the area who are ready to take quick refresher courses so they can teach.

More than 450 volunteers have registered for first-aid classes with Mrs. Pine—and she's determined all of them will be given training at hours they can come.

1000 at Brightwood Defense Meeting

About 1000 persons turned out last night for a meeting sponsored by the Brightwood Defense Council in Paul Junior High School.

Talks were made by Clement Murphy, chief air-raid warden of the District, and Thomas F. Ferry, chairman of the Brightwood Council.

Murphy praised the work of the council, particularly of Elmer Johnson, deputy warden for the area.

A British film on air raid protective work, "The Warning," was shown.

Trees, Shrubs, Flowers And National Defense

This is the unauthorized story of a Washington businessman who sought to help out in his Nation's defense—but ended up with a feeling of anticlimax.

He was playing golf with Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and no end pleased when the Secretary asked if he wanted to participate in a defense committee meeting. When the call came through, however, he was on his way out of town and had to send a substitute—whose name was duly cleared through the proper channels.

With instructions to take copious notes, the substitute arrived—was ushered into a session on ornamental trees, shrubs and flowers. Being a very busy man, he wondered what it do. Then he learned the talk really had a defense angle—because some present were wanting to know how flowers could best be used for camouflage. There was talk of planting peonies among vegetables, for instance, to fool "enemy airmen" who might want to cut off our food supply. And there was discussion of ways to plant shrubs to make "false paths" up to industrial plants.

After an hour, a telephone call rescued the substitute and he rushed on back to his own business. But he still doesn't know whether to feel guilty or cheated.

Dean Landis Tackles OCD Chaos

separate has been made—but the division has failed to make sense to volunteers trying to operate in Washington's 65 defense areas.

The District Defense Council has announced it would be in charge of both feeding and housing in the "first phase" and that the Red Cross would take over for the next two phases. The first phase is specified as emergency and temporary, the other two are for more serious and more permanent eventualities.

There May Be 'Fighting Over the Body'

Casualty feeding stations established by the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross in 65 areas, for instance, are supposed to feed immediately all wounded persons. The emergency feeding units of the defense council, under Mary Mason, will feed anybody still on the hoof and able to reach the emergency station.

"What it means," declared a woman who is heading a defense council feeding unit, "is they will be fighting over the body, besides, the volunteers have enough to do without being called upon to join in two housing and two feeding programs and places to set up these stations are getting scarce in the District. It's crowded here already, you know.

"What I'm doing is going ahead with defense instructions, but I'm ready to turn all my work over to the Red Cross any time and am telling them so."

Emergency housing units are seeking rooms where persons bombed out of homes can stay for 24 to 48 hours. The Red Cross would take them in tow after the first phase of the emergency was over.

"But suppose the Red Cross was so busy already it couldn't come for them, or something." There are all sorts of things not clear about this," said the same woman.

Red Cross Official Thinks It's Workable

Otto Lund, manager of the D. C. Red Cross Chapter, while admitting the friction was increasing, said the situation is "still in a workable state, if everybody's just willing to give and take."

"That's the trouble," he said

His office, he said, is in receipt of a letter from Dr. John A. Reed, head of emergency medical services for the defense council, saying the Red Cross has done a good job setting up the casualty stations. The casualty stations, by the way, are under Dr. Reed in the District, although they are staffed by Red Cross volunteers.

The National Restaurant Association, siding with the Red Cross, has come worward to make its feeding facilities available to that agency.

Meanwhile, what are the provinces of these two volunteer agencies, one of which has long looked on emergency food, clothing, and shelter as its special job, the other just entering the field?

THERE are 533 employes in OCD—451 of them receiving pay, 29 volunteering freely, 11 getting paid on a per-diem basis, and 43 assigned by other agencies such as War and Navy.

Yesterday Eloise Davison, $1-a-year woman who came to the office with the title of assistant director, announced she was going back to New York. This was the first resignation since Dean Landis took over the job.

There will probably be others before all the kinks are ironed out.

Volunteer Firemen Form Alumni Group

Nineteen volunteer firemen attached to Engine Co. No. 31, Connecticut Avenue and Fessenden Street, who were among the first to finish the District defense training course, have formed an "alumni" group which will meet every Wednesday evening to continue their studies of fire-fighting methods, it was announced yesterday.

Steve Cosier has been elected president of the group, William F. Sigmund, secretary, and Melford Sanders, treasurer. Visits to fire alarm headquarters and the fire training school are planned. A survey of fire hydrant and call box locations in the Chevy Chase area is also scheduled.

Women of Brentwood Urged to Volunteer

Women residents of the Brentwood are not employed during the day were asked to volunteer for air-raid warden service in an appeal last night by Harrry G. Ritner, assistant deputy warden in charge of training. Information may be obtained at Brentwood civilian defense headquarters, 2500 Fourteenth Street Northeast.

More than 65 additional volunteers to maintain full day-time coverage are needed, Ritner said. Volunteers will receive training in gas protection, handling of incendiary bombs, and first-aid work.

War Housing Sabotaged

Washington's critical housing situation took a turn for the worse yesterday when Congress sent the Lanham bill to the White House shorn of its provision for construction of wartime housing projects here. That decision is particularly amazing because of the furor raised in Congress over the moving of Federal agencies away from the Capital. Every legislator must be aware of the fact that dwellings for low-income families have entirely disappeared from rental lists. The unpreparedness of the city to house Government workers in this category may become a serious drag upon our war effort. Yet Congress has completely eliminated provision for such housing from this emergency bill, which authorizes expenditure of 300 million dollars to house war workers elsewhere.

The effect is to knock the foundation from under the war-housing plan so carefully worked out by the office of the housing coordinator. Private industry can still go ahead with the 10,000 family units it has promised to build before next July. The RFC can still build its 7500 apartments for workers just above the low-income category. But public housing, where needs for additional space are most acute, has been completely eliminated so far as Government workers are concerned. This action is so egregiously short-sighted that it is difficult to believe that a majority of our legislators knew what they were doing when the bill was passed.

As if to give this blunder a farcical touch, there is talk of an agreement to provide for Washington's housing needs in a special bill. No one has explained why this provision should be eliminated from the Lanham bill, where it belonged, only to make a special trip through congested legislative chambers. Make-work schemes for Congress in wartime simply do not make sense. The fact is that some group in Congress has sabotaged the Capital's war-housing program with ruthless disregard of the effect it may have upon the Nation's nerve center. That action can only spread further confusion and lack of morale among employes asked to come to Washington to serve their country. Some means of escaping its consequences must be found.

Plums For The Asking

The Tydings amendment to the price-control bill has attracted surprisingly little attention in view of its major importance from the standpoint of the Administration. The amendment in question provides for Presidential appointment and Senatorial confirmation of all employes of the Office of Price Administration receiving $4000 per year or more and all chiefs of regional and State agencies established by the administrator. In his column, the Federal Diary, Jerry Kluttz called attention a few days ago to the difficulty of reconciling this provision with the requirement, written in by the House and retained by the Senate, that all officers and employes of OPA shall be appointed on the basis of merit, with no political test or qualification permitted. Confirmation by the Senate of the higher paid appointees was urged on the specious ground that it was essential to maintain a check on the personnel of the powerful price-fixing agency, both as a matter of policy and to prevent overstaffing. There is a rather grim humor in the latter suggestion, in view of the fact that the Tydings amendment would provide the Senators with several hundred tempting political plums to distribute among the faithful.

The OPA needs highly trained men to deal with the technical problems of price control. And passage of the Tydings amendment would seriously hamper recruitment of such men. Moreover, it might (and probably would) result in the disruption of the existing organization, since the appointment of all members of the present OPA staff earning $4000 or more would have to be submitted to the Senate for approval under the new legislative setup. The Tydings amendment should be tossed out by the conference committee along with the unacceptable farm relief provisions of the price-control bill. For it would throw open the door of OPA to job hungry politicians. And we know well from past experience what that implies in terms of reduced efficiency and impaired morale in the Government services.

Up To Mr. Roosevelt

One of the greatest powers of the Executive is not mentioned in the Constitution, but it is the one more than any other that insures efficiency in that branch of our Government. That is the power to fire. Mr. Roosevelt referred to this power at his press conference on Tuesday when he was asked a question about the status of Leon Henderson and Secretary Wickard under the Senate version of the price-control bill. Allowing himself to be quoted directly, evidently to stress his power, the President said, "I can fire either one." There was need for such a reminder, not by the President, but to the President. He has the power to fire, but he has seldom used it. And it should now be used vigorously. Some of the persons in high office were put in their jobs for purposes which either have been liquidated or are now outdated. They were appointed to fight a depression, to pay off political debts, to help in the reelection of the President, to improve labor and agricultural conditions, and so on. These are all peacetime purposes, yet the appointees are still in the same offices, and these offices now are concerned—all of them—with the prosecution of the war effort. It stands to reason that some of the appointees would not now be chosen as wartime administrators. But, as the President says, they can be fired—by the President; and the right men put in their place—by the President.

The President hitherto has been congenitally incapable of firing his political friends after their unfitness even for peacetime office has been proved. As Commander in Chief he may have more temerity. For, as time goes on, and the war becomes grimmer, he must concentrate on his role as Commander in Chief. And that means he must secure efficiency in the conduct of the war in Washington. The people will expect it of him. There is no longer the easy disposition to indulge the inefficiency in Washington which is broadcast throughout the country by one revelation after another. Moreover, a house cleaning is the people's due. The national unity which the President has bespoken and which has been attained has meant a truce to politics in our relations with the President. Such an achievement requires a corresponding obligation from the White House. If politics are now eschewed by the people, politics must be abandoned by the President. That is a moral contract. Specifically Mr. Roosevelt ought to revamp his Administration across party lines, not only in the light of our war requirements, but also as a reciprocal gesture to the American people. Perhaps the Commander in Chief can and will do some firing where the President couldn't and wouldn't. At any rate, the general reply to Mr. Roosevelt's statement "I can fire either one" will be "Let's see you do it."

Truman Report

Senator Truman has given the country a very dark picture of inefficiency and waste in our war preparations. The OPM has been negligent in failing to draw upon the full industrial capacity of the country for the production of military equipment. The Navy has let contracts so wasteful that private companies have turned back at least four million dollars after voluntarily requesting that their profits be reduced. Strikes and threatened strikes have seriously cut down the Nation's output of weapons that are now desperately needed to protect the lives of Americans on the firing line. Looking backward, it is easy to detect bungling in many places, lack of foresight, and in some cases needless waste of funds.

Undoubtedly the committee has put its finger on many weak points in the defense production setup which carried over into the war period. To that extent it has performed a useful service. Its hearings and criticism probably helped to bring about the creation of the War Production Board, with Donald Nelson at the head, to take over tasks which the OPM and the SPAB have fumbled. The failure to make use of small plants capable of producing war supplies is a problem still to be solved. There is good reason for the Truman committee to keep harping on a wider distribution of contracts. In some instances, too, the failure of responsible officials to make decisions that will permit segments of the war effort to go forward amounts to a scandal. The most flagrant example is the Currier case. After months of delay the Federal Works Agency is still holding up the award of a contract for construction of 300 defense homes by this company because of a petty row as to whether A. F. of L. or C. I. O. men are entitled to do the work.

It is easy, however, to press general criticism of the war effort too far, and in various instances Senator Truman does precisely that. The simple fact is that the Nation was not prepared for war and that many groups, even within Congress, are responsible for that fact. Vast sums of money could have been saved if the War and Navy Departments had had plenty of time to put their establishments on a war footing. One reason they did not have sufficient time, of course, is because Congress had denied them funds for advance preparation. Congress talked for long weeks, moreover, about the draft. When it got around to appropriating funds for Army camps, winter was near, and the cold weather greatly increased the costs of construction. Surely the Quartermaster General's Office in these circumstances deserves a mark of credit for getting the camps ready in time to avoid serious delay in mobilizing the National Guard and the selectees.

In some instances, too, Senator Truman is careless with his facts. One man whom his committee thought should be court-martialed, he said, was "promoted and sent to Puerto Rico." Presumably he was referring to a certain reserve officer who was removed from an assignment and sent to Puerto Rico because of inefficiency. Instead of being promoted, he was demoted to a job of minor responsibility. These are critical times in which alert watchfulness on the part of Congress is needed. But the guiding aim of every effort should be to strengthen our forces that are now or soon will be confronting the enemy. That cannot be accomplished by publicizing only one side of a controversy, by distorting facts or by unfairly apportioning blame for past short-sightedness. It is a war and not an argument that we must win.

Tires For Taxis

Price Administrator Henderson is strongly opposed to the Randolph bill providing that D. C. taxicabs shall be entitled to priorities in respect to tires, parts and accessories along with other motor vehicles operating as common carriers. Mr. Henderson's objections are well taken, if we assume—as he does—that taxicabs will continue to operate as they now do. Any relaxation of the ban upon sales of new tires to taxicab owners would, as we have already stated, be most unwise, unless accompanied by a stringent system of supervision and control. Motor buses, for example, follow regular routes and take on passengers to the limit of capacity. If it should be decided that taxicab service in the District must be maintained to supplement inadequate transportation facilities, then taxis, too, should be operated as far as possible like other common carriers. The number of licensed cabs should be strictly limited, the areas to be covered by them should be defined and compulsory pickup services should be instituted. By such means much of the useless and wasteful taxi riding of which Mr. Henderson complains would be eliminated. But unless that is done—and the Randolph bill makes no provision for such safeguards—it would be folly to make exceptions to the tire rationing order for taxis.

However, all that Mr. Henderson has to say about wasteful use of taxicabs applies with much greater force to operation of private automobiles, which cannot be effectively regulated as to use. The Nation's rubber reserves could be made to last much longer if the use of private machines were to be banned forthwith, with designated exceptions for professional and business men. If that were done, and if tires on private machines were commandeered for more pressing public uses, it would be possible to assure operation of regulated taxi services for a much longer period of time. What is wrong with that plan? It would be much less wasteful of rubber than the program now in force.

Know Thy Neighbor

The Pan American Union has announced a program to give students of the New World a better understanding of inter-American affairs. Young people of the 21 republics are being invited to compete for two four-year university scholarships, each valued at $6000, or for one of the 200 cash prizes which will be awarded also to those writing superior essays on the subject, "What Inter-American Cooperation Means to My Country." In sponsoring the contest, the union offers a large scale opportunity for the youth of this generation to remedy the general ignorance which hitherto has impeded good neighbor relationships between the peoples of the Western Hemisphere. The Union will conduct a "Know Your Neighbor" forum, and will distribute factual information to schools for competitors to use in learning enough about their neighbor countries to write intelligently. Parents and teachers would do a farsighted service if they encouraged participation in this contest, for it has been organized to be educational in a particularly beneficial way.

GAS MASK

I found myself in this new task,
Face downward in my grotesque mask.
Down the long line, the figures curled
Like creatures of another world—
Black-faced, huge-eyed, and like me prone
In dew that lay on grass and stone.
It was the morning light that drew
Its fingertips on the thick dew.
And then I saw through my round glass
Amazing pictures come to pass—
Orange and gold on the wet grass.

I shook my head; they were still there
Close to the earth, but hung in air.
They drew their colors fold on fold:
A new, strange country was unrolled.
And with these wonders at my face,
I searched another world in space.

Federal Union

Mark Sullivan, in his column in The Post January 11, questions the expediency of bringing forward the question of a "universal world government" at this time.

Certainly the time for bringing forward this question is not after the war has been won, if we are to judge by what happened after the last war. We learned from the failure of that war to achieve the aims we thought we were fighting for, that the peace is more important than the war. During that war, expressions of peace views were repressed as pro-German. At the close of that war we had the peace of Versailles, which, to indulge in understatement, was not what it might have been, and the hopes of decent men the world over went unfulfilled.

A plan accepted now for keeping the peace should bring about greater unity, greater force and a more intelligent prosecution of the war. But Mr. Sullivan thinks that the difficulties to be encountered in getting any kind of plan accepted now would impair unity and divert force from the war.

Since he seems quite sincere, I should like with equal sincerity to ask him when he thinks the expedient time to be for bringing forward this question. In other words would he make a constructive suggestion as to the best time?

If he is unsympathetic to the plan of Federal Union and would not favor it being brought forward at any time, what plan or suggestion would he offer to insure that this war will not also be in vain?

I am not a member of Federal Union and make these questions in good faith. CITIZEN.

Decentralization Problems

One point has been overlooked in the discussion relative to the decentralization of Government agencies. That is the matter of the reduction of the budget of the regular departments for the fiscal year beginning July 1. How many of the employes who will move this spring, selling their homes at a sacrifice or for half a shoestring down and the balance over a long period of years with the necessity of several foreclosures, or renting their homes to others who will never take the care of them that a resident owner does, or who will leave their families here, thus undertaking the maintenance of two homes, will, after their financial and family sacrifices, retain their positions? Will they be dumped out of the service, in a strange city, within a few months? The matter of next year's budget for the agencies to be moved should be settled first.

Furthermore, the pending Ramspeck retirement bill provides for optional retirement at 60 years of age after 30 or more years of service. The option may be exercised by either the employe or the Government. Yet, on the other hand, we have the spectacle of the draft of all men from 18 to and including 64 years of age. It is suggested that those who would be eligible to retire in order to remain in Washington, might offer to forego that privilege provided they are permitted to remain in Washington to perform liaison or other service for the office or within the department of which the office is a part, at a salary equal to what might be drawn as an annuity. There are many who feel that such a reduction in income would be preferable to the financial losses, uncertainties and family dislocations involved in moving. That feeling is intensified when they realize that there is so much vacant land in the District and immediately surrounding it which is available for temporary buildings, including much Federally owned land.

Peace Treaty

This thought is engaging the minds of most everyone. Many formulas will be advanced by individuals and groups covering a wide range of ideas, each aiming to bring about a return to normal conditions and to prevent a recurrence of these intermittent wars. Some suggested solutions will be based on revenge, others on reparations and promises, while others of the sob-sister variety will expound on the virtues of "the poor, misguided German people who have been misled and betrayed by their leaders." Some will dwell on the alleged harshness of the Versailles Treaty and entirely overlook the fact that history does not record a milder treaty than the one complained of. There was nothing wrong with this treaty and a close scrutiny will disclose that its purpose was to rebuild Germany along peaceful lines and give her the opportunity to restore herself and take her proper place in the family of nations. It contained nothing of a permanent restrictive nature.

Germany's failure to observe the treaty and the Allies' failure to enforce it constitutes the primal cause of the present war.

The sacredness of treaties, writings and promises is not a part of the German mental make-up. With full knowledge of these deficiencies let's not repeat our past mistakes. Let's educate these world disturbers to such a high degree that they will be too smart to try it again.

The educational program should begin with the complete demilitarization of the German army and people. The destruction of all machinery used or useful in the manufacture of military supplies. The entire German army, including all officers, should be divided into units to be designated as restoration groups. These groups should be sent into the destroyed areas where they would be required to fully restore, with their own hands, the hundreds of homes, buildings and public works which they have wantonly destroyed. They should be kept in work camps under command of armed forces from the injured countries until the restoration is complete. All costs to be borne by Germany.

This will certainly be a liberal education and provide sound insurance for the future.

Wagon Wheels

Your editorials, as a rule, have a remarkable degree of logic. But, as the saying goes, there are exceptions. I refer to yours of the fourteenth, entitled "Tire Thief."

I am only a layman, in the art of war and the same, in the art of propaganda. But, being (I hope) a human American, my instinctive logic fails to "gee" with yours in two respects: (1) * * * "We shall presently have to revert to the transportation methods of our ancestors," and (2)  * * we shall doubtless be able to resume the large-scale breeding of horses and other beasts of burden."

The ordinary automobile, I am told, has somewhat more than the power of one horse under its hood. Even in times such as these, it's easier to breed horsepower than horses. What's wrong with putting your "wagon wheels" on the "gas buggies?" E. M. MacLEOD.

The Peace

C. M. M. proposes to have an Army of a million men installed in Germany after the war to prevent a resurgence of totalitarian ideology which might again seize power and transform the country into another military machine.

It seems to me that C. M. M. has thoroughly misunderstood the causes of this war if he believes that this projected solution will remove the possibilities of another war from that quarter of the world. Even if the totalitarian regime now in power in Germany is forcibly removed and the people of that country are in a position to choose their own type of government (which, incidentally, may be another attempt at monarchy), the presence of an army of a million men is certainly not calculated to insure peace. One would suspect that even the most liberal of Germans would seethe with indignation, an indignation that could once again be capitalized upon by unscrupulous men to participate in a revolt against foreign aggression.

It is hard to turn to a country that has produced such a vicious government as Germany and say to it: "We have removed the actual cause of your troubles. Now let us sit down and discuss the real issues at stake." But, hard or not, that is what will have to be done if any sort of peace is to be written. We should not make the mistake of the last war and have the men who write the peace treaties be the same men who will attempt to solve the problems involved. It may be necessary to disarm Germany completely; at least, enough to prevent retaliatory action during the crucial period of discussion. But even that would not be enough. To have Germany disarm completely and permit other countries to maintain huge armaments would be to disavow the rule of law once again.

It therefore seems to me that if any attempt to prevent another war is to succeed, it must be based on the freedom that our President has claimed as a fundamental one: freedom from want. There must be some adequate distribution or, at least, ease of procuring, raw materials; there must also be a radical limitation of tariffs and economic barriers between countries. If the peace is to be at all lasting, there must be a definite understanding that some sort of economic union between all countries is to be worked out. Revenge as such should not even play a role in an attempt to map out the shape of things to come after the war. IRVING LEVITAS.

Price Control Pressure

I have been much impressed by your editorials on Congressional football playing with the price-control bill.

One thing strikes me as a large omission in all discussions I have seen of "farm bloc" legislators, and "farmers" organizations:

Nowhere are the pressure sources revealed. For instance, I am told that the largest cotton (raw cotton) producer in the world is the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. And many of us are conscious in a general way of the mass production on an essentially industrial basis of many farm products, e. g., citrus fruits and canned goods products in California.

And yet, even supposedly sophisticated commentators talk as if the man behind the team-drawn plow is the one responsible for "farm bloc" actions. Having numerous relatives who are dirt farmers, I am positive that that silent premise is not true.

The Post Impressionist

Anybody Ring?

It was as a runner in Wall Street that I began the interminable business of trying to earn my daily bread. A runner is an inside and outside messenger. Usually he is bonded. Somewhere in the past there must have been some fleet footwork connected with the job to give it that name. But we helped to change all that. It seemed to be the feeling on our bench that anything faster than a meander was plain undignified and quite unnecessary. Certainly such activity would have been out of character with us.

The bench, to continue the glossary, was the term by which we were referred to collectively. This derived from the fact that runners, while waiting for calls, occupied benches near the head boy's desk. We took calls in turn, moving along on the bench. A number would come up on the annunciator board on the head boy's desk; he would turn around and say: "Twenty-two, Paul," and Paul would go to the desk or department which had the number 22. No. 22 might require anything from a ledger from the vault to a swiss-on-rye from "The Eat 'Em and Beat 'Em," a neighborhood eatery where they trusted you to total your own check.

Speed was a point on which our exalted ruler disagreed strongly with us. He was the treasurer of the company. Martinets are usually thought of as being small, but this one was an exception. He was a large, broad-shouldered fellow with an ingrown dictator complex. He was forever devising new ways to check on us, to speed us up, and to make us unhappier than we were. Often I wondered when he found time to do his treasuring.

Whenever he descended upon us he would whittle us down with a stern unwavering glance. He had the steeliest eyes I've ever seen. Once—purely for the fun of it—I stared him out of countenance. Just when I thought he was about to spring upon me he blurted out a surprised and surprising "Good morning."

It was his idea to time us on every outside errand. When we would be sent down to Whitehall Street, we would be allowed twenty minutes. If we got back in fifteen minutes or less, it counted as an "early." If we took twenty-five minutes or more, it counted as a "late." At the end of the month the treasurer tried to balance up our earliest and latest. You can see for yourself that this was often embarrassing for us.

Catch-as-catch-can was the way we handled inside calls to all but the big ones. Number 12 would ring, and one of us would climb to the "bookkeepers' balcony, a long room crowded end to end with clerks sitting at high tables.

"Who rang?" we would yell, rushing to get out of the place before anyone could respond. "Anybody ring?" We were never insistent about it and never any too loud. They had to be fast to catch us. It wasn't important, anyway, we used to figure. When they really wanted something they would lie in wait for us.

All in all, those were carefree, happy days. We all admired the president of the company; we thought he was just what the president of the company should be. But there wasn't one of us who would have changed places with him. He didn't have enough fun. We had ten times as much as he did. Almost everything was fun to us.

Meeting a boat to take charge of an officer's mother, getting tickets for theater or railroad, securing passports, certifying checks, bringing large sums in cash from the bank, carrying a hundred thousand dollars in securities, making bank deposits, being in the runners' know—all was thrilling and fun.

We used to compare notes to see who would get the largest check to be certified. Once I had one certified for over two millions; that was about the largest.

It is still easy for me to share the thrill of a local telegraph messenger boy who has told me excitedly of presenting a petition to the President of the United States; or when he exclaims, as he did one day: "I met a real, live, honest-to-goodness, genuine English lady today."

That was pretty much the way we reacted to similar experiences. I used to be sent sometimes to the private office of a man who is now a member of the President's Cabinet. My instructions were always: "Put it into his hands personally."

Always his staff would try to separate me from my message, but they were never successful. They would have had as much luck prying Lieut. Rowan loose from his message to Garcia. Eventually they would yield and deliver me and the message together into the presence.

But one of our boys was more interested in the fishes in the Aquarium, down at the Battery, than in the most august of dignitaries. One gathered he had seen his fill of the latter. Wallace was his name, and he sure loved fishes, great and small. An errand to Whitehall Street, allotted 20 minutes in the treasurer's calculating scheme of things, would take him three hours.

Wallace was the problem child of one of the company's most important customers, and nothing could be done about his lapses. He knew that he was generally thought to be a bit left-handed in the upper reaches, and he played this for all it was worth.

"They kept me waiting," he would mumble doggedly when the head boy angrily complained about his taking so long.

The head boy would give up, knowing he could get no satisfaction anyhow, and Wallace would continue an absorbed pacing of the floor, hands behind his back.

In a little while he would shake his head emphatically and say, to no one in particular: "Gee, them fishes sure can swim."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Nelson's Authority

LIPPMANN

THERE IS a difference of opinion, which needs to be examined further, among those who very earnestly wish to accomplish the same result. It is as to whether Mr. Donald Nelson is likely to have sufficient authority under an Executive order of the President, or whether in addition his office should be made a statutory Government department and the head of it given Cabinet rank.

It appears from what Mr. Krock wrote in the New York Times on Friday that Mr. Baruch thinks the Executive order alone will put Mr. Nelson in the stronger position, and this view is shared by Mr. Mark Sullivan. The other view, which is held by many men of experience and proven foresight both inside and outside the present Administration, is that for the long pull, when the honeymoon period of enthusiastic publicity is over, it will be found highly advisable to have given Mr. Nelson's office and his powers a more solid statutory foundation.

THERE IS, it must be emphasized, no disagreement here about the objective but only a difference of opinion about ways and means. All are agreed that the task of procurement and production should be under the final control of a chief of supply, to whom are delegated all the necessary powers now dispersed among many departments and agencies or vested in the President. All are pleased that there is not to be another board because, as Woodrow Wilson once said, a board is almost always long, narrow, and wooden. All are now agreed that the President is now intending to give Mr. Nelson the necessary powers, and that Mr. Nelson is an excellent choice.

All are agreed, moreover, that Mr. Nelson will need all the authority with which he can be invested. It is at this point that the difference of opinion begins. Mr. Baruch's view is, so we are told, that "with a confirming Executive order and steady support by the President," Mr. Nelson will outrank everyone but the President in authority over production and procurement. "He will not be put on a par with Cabinet officers because that would reduce his general authority." Mr. Mark Sullivan states the view in even stronger terms: "The kind of authority Mr. Nelson needs is that which is expressed not in formal rank, nor official documents, but in the personal attitude of the President." If the White House circle "are made to understand that Mr. Nelson has Presidential authority and confidence, then Mr. Nelson will have authority. If the President should happen, by so faint a sign as a fleeting facial expression, to show any abatement of confidence in Mr. Nelson, then Mr. Nelson's prestige will vanish, and with it his authority and effectiveness."

WHAT MR. SULLIVAN has said here is, I fear, the exact truth, and this is precisely why many, who have been praying over this problem a long time, have come to the conclusion that Mr. Nelson's office should be founded upon something stronger than the "fleeting facial expressions" of the President. They hold that this office, second only to that of the President, should be founded on statutory law as the only known form of guaranty against the fluctuations of personal favor.

They believe that the authority of Mr. Nelson over the supply branches of the War and the Navy Departments and over the other relevant agencies should not be solely dependent from day to day, from hour to hour, upon the President's favor. They hold also that the President's favor will be more steadfast if Mr. Nelson's office has been established by Congressional statute, and reinforced by the legislative and the popular support which that entails.

TO THOSE who say, as Mr. Krock reports Mr. Baruch as saying, that with Presidential favor Mr. Nelson will be superior to the Cabinet, those who hold the other view would say in reply that authority is precarious and fragile when it depends solely upon favor. They would say to Mr. Baruch that an arrangement which worked fairly well in the latter stages of the other war is not necessarily the best arrangement for this war, that Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt are not the same man.

They would say also that a close observation of affairs during the past 18 months has convinced many men that the established departments of Government are more powerful, in the long run, day in and day out, in the details which really control the result, than are the improvised agencies which rise and fall by Presidential favor, have no settled and statutory existence or procedure, and are operated on an emergency basis. Many a policy approved by the White House and entrusted with much publicity to a temporary official without clear rank or authority has become bogged down, snarled in red tape, sterilized by bureaucratic inertia, while the President, who is a busy man, has turned his attention to new problems, thinking he has settled the matter.

FOR THESE REASONS it will be unwise to dismiss too easily, saying that "there is little in that," the suggestion that when Mr. Nelson's office has been set up by Executive order and with the President's full favor, this temporary structure should be solidified and reinforced by the statutory creation of a department of supply. Such a department would, of course, have Cabinet rank, the rank being the outer aspect of the inner substance, namely the true delegation of power over procurement and production from the President and from many departments and agencies to one powerful department of Government.

Is there really any other way by which the President can actually divest himself of a responsibility that he cannot hope to exercise while he is Commander in Chief and the leader of the Nation? Is there any other way—if so it should be proposed—by which the delegation of power to Mr. Nelson's office, that is to Mr. Nelson or his successors, will be substantial, convincing and durable?

New Partners

By J. B. Priestley

Strong Fellow Feeling

This is another in a series of columns wirelessed from London by the famous novelist, essayist and playwright.

London (By Wireless).

THE WAR partnership between the United States and Britain is very popular among ordinary folk here. This is a widespread and very genuine feeling in the community. It is not a question simply of having a new and very powerful ally, but the general feeling among men in the street is that at last all the English-speaking peoples are standing together. The fact that both of us have sustained similar losses in the Far East has only deepened the sympathy. Just as Japan's treacherous onslaughts immediately unified American opinion, so too did they quickly but thoroughly cement the Anglo-American alliance.

America's entry into the last war did not, in my opinion, create anything like the same strong fellow feeling. There were many prejudices on both sides that remained and, indeed, got a good airing. I was a soldier in those days and can well remember that we tended to shrug our shoulders when many of your fellows came over in the spirit of "now we're going to show you something." There were often unpleasant little taunts by either side.

THAT ATMOSPHERE has vanished. I keep my ears open as I move about the country and I can declare with truth that I have never heard here among ordinary folk any statement that has suggested anything but the warmest, friendliest feeling and a sense of satisfaction that we are now all in it together, accompanied often by some remark expressing the hope that the American people will be spared the full horror of total war.

American news is read with keen interest and sympathy and American commentators employed by the British Broadcasting Corporation have very large audiences.

It must be remembered that the public of 25 years ago was nothing like so well informed about America as we are now. This difference is extremely important. The regular radio commentators like Raymond Gram Swing and Elmer Davis, whose talks come at one of the peak hours here, have kept the British public in touch with events and opinion in the United States. Again, the popular press has now some first-class correspondents in America and gives them more space. In addition, well-known Britons who have crossed the Atlantic have been cabling excellent articles.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is very popular among our people. They have heard many of his more important speeches. He talks the way they like. They believe him to be a great, militant democrat. Over and over again I have heard him praised, but I cannot once remember hearing him attacked here. In the newsreel theaters he shares the applause with Churchill.

Here again is a new factor in Anglo-American relations—the influence of the films, an influence that is too often overlooked. Nearly all our workers, especially the younger ones, are regular patrons of the motion pictures, and these pictures—particularly "March of Time" and the newsreels—tell them a good deal about American life and opinion. Even Hollywood, for all its nonsense, has done much to make our people understand the American way of life. Young people, strongly influenced during their hours of relaxation, see and hear for themselves in the picture theaters much of what is happening in America.

Again, it must be remembered that ordinary folk here—and especially those in the heavily bombed areas—have already seen for themselves what American sympathy and generosity can do. They have seen American ambulances at work. Often their children have received gifts of toys, clothing and food from America. Nor is that all. We forget that an enormous number of people in Britain have relatives in America and that the war has brought those relatives nearer.

I have never done a talk on the air to America and mentioned in it some particular part of Britain without receiving enthusiastic letters from American citizens who were either born there or remember that one of their parents was born there.

THIS RESPONSE to our new partnership may surprise some American readers, but I suggest that those readers are not acquainted with two important facts. The first fact is that the Britain about which some sections of American opinion and its press is—or was—suspicious was always the governmental, official, plutocratic, traditional Britain which by no means represents the ordinary folk.

The second fact, which follows from the first, is that the British people are much more democratic and much more like ordinary American folk than is commonly supposed in the United States. For one fancy gentleman with a monocle here there are about 50,000 plain, industrious workers. The West End of London (where the American correspondents are compelled to spend most of their time), is not Britain, and, indeed, this represents it far more than Washington does the United States. And the new Britain that is really toiling for and fighting this war is far more like America in ideas, outlooks and habits than most Americans imagine even now.

Our two men at the top get along together; our fighting men take to each other; our industrial and other experts speak each other's language; and our great masses of workers are equally sympathetic and should be given still more opportunities to get together.

If there are people in between—officials, business magnates or born mischief-makers—who cannot or will not understand the opposite numbers across the Atlantic, I do not think they matter much or can do any great harm. The foundations of the partnership have been laid deep. And nobody knows this better than Dr. Goebbels, who has already tried every trick to create mutual suspicion and has failed miserably.

Sinarquista Party

By John W. White

Mexico Suffers But Watches It

Mexico City.

MEXICO'S newest "ism," the 5-year-old green-shirt, reactionary Sinarquista movement, began the new year with a renewal of its denunciation of democracy; a denial that it is pro-Facist; and a pledge to work more intensely than ever during 1942 in carrying out an 8-point program designed to make every Mexican a free citizen in a self-sufficient nation no longer dependent on "the imperialistic powers."

Governmental and political circles generally admit that the Sinarquista movement is something that will have to be reckoned with in the near future. It claims to have half a million members, mostly among the strongly religious peasant class. In its own published words, "The Sinarquista movement is fighting for the restoration of a Christian order; and liberal democracy, as well as Nazi-Fascism and Communism, is contrary to that order."

The real political objectives of the movement are not clear and there is a great deal of mud throwing on both sides. In church circles it is compared to the Jocist movement in Belgium and it is predicted that the Sinarquistas will do things as great as those done by the Jocists. The movement admits being strongly Rightist, nationalist, religious and fanatically anti-Communist. It also admits having been organized as an opposition party to the very Leftist Mexican Revolutionary Party, which is the government party. Consequently, the Leftists denounce the Sinarquistas as pro-Nazi and pro-Fascist, and the Sinarquistas brand all their enemies as Communists.

1. The Sinarquista movement is not an electoral party; it is not a Fascist movement; it is a national union with graded rank and discipline; it is a youthful impulse, happy and optimistic, severe and generous, which battles against all that is worn out, rotten and bad in Mexico.

2. The Sinarquista movement is not an organization designed to seize the political power without any other purpose than to put you out so I can get in. It is an organization that is fighting to restore the social order in Mexico that was destroyed by liberalism, pseudo-democracy and anarchy.

THE NAME "Sinarquista" is supposed to mean "without anarchy," but the coiners of the word merely substituted the Spanish negative prefix "sin" for the Greek negative prefix "an" in the word "anarchy," so the word really still means "without government," just as does the word "anarchy." But no one pretends that this is the meaning of the word to members of the movement.

The charge that the movement is pro-Nazi is based largely on the fact that the members wear a green-shirt uniform with an arm-band on the left sleeve; use a salute; and recognize a supreme leader who is a faithful counterpart of the Fuehrer and the Duce. The arm-band is red, with a white disc on which is a small map of Mexico in green, thus combining the national colors—red, white and green.

The "Leader," Salvador Abascal, recently turned the administrative affairs of the party over to one of his lieutenants so that he could lead an interesting migration of 100 families to Lower California, where they are being settled on land granted to them by the national government. Eventually, Abascal intends to move 500 Sinarquista families to Lower California. His enemies denounce the new colony as a dangerous pro-Fascist settlement on the Pacific, supposed to have some sinister Fifth Column purpose. Abascal says he is taking his followers to Lower California to remove them from the persecution to which he charges they are subjected in the central agricultural states. On the first Sunday of the new year a collection was taken up throughout Mexico to help finance the migration of these families to their new homes. Every member of the organization was asked to donate at least one peso, and as much more as he could afford.

ALTHOUGH the Sinarquistas have no representation in Congress, they insist that it was their party strength which forced the two most spectacular political events of 1941. The first of these was the resignation of the minister of education and a drastic reorganization of the public school system to remove the strong Communist influence that had dominated the schools during recent years. The second was the passage of a law on the last day of the congressional session, and at the request of President Avila Camacho, defining and regulating the enforcement of article 3 of the constitution. This article prohibits the teaching of religion in the schools, but makes the teaching of socialism compulsory. The new regulating law prohibits the teaching of communism under the guise of socialism and forbids the religious persecution that was practiced while the Communists dominated the schools.

The Sinarquistas had carried on a violent campaign against the minister of education and article 3 all during 1941. They aspire eventually to restore religious teaching in the schools.

The eight-point program for 1942 pledges the movement to fight for the recognition of the fundamental right of every Mexican to live; to possess a piece of land; to take part in the public business, and to educate his children as he pleases. New centers of population are to be created, similar to those in Lower California and Sonora, by transporting families to the fertile sections of the country, where they can live off the land. The movement plans to cooperate in the construction of community roads and the building of schools, especially in the Indian villages. It pledges itself to continue fighting for the pacification of the interior so that its members can devote themselves to tilling the soil. It also proposes to fight for respect of the right to work; the abolition of the practice of discharging workers wholesale because they belong to certain unions or organizations, and cessation of the practice of depriving the peasants of their land.

ANOTHER OBJECTIVE is the increasing of all lines of production until Mexico is no longer dependent on foreign countries for anything, which means the industrialization of an agrarian population. The ultimate aim of this year's political program is to attain the goal where every Mexican shall be a citizen exercising all his rights and complying with all his duties.

The Sinarquista movement is opposed to the government and the government is opposed to it, but, as government officials have explained, Mexico is a democracy and the Sinarquista movement has every right to exist. But it is being watched closely.

Income Tax Becomes Democratic

MY FRIENDS at the Treasury, where they keep the deficit and the veritable I. O. U.'s from the other war, including some in denominations of 20 millions autographed in Mussolini's bold Italian hand, have been asking me to ease the information to about 7 million of my fellow-citizens who never have paid an income tax or filed a return that this is the year their woes begin. On March 15, all these new members of the lodge of sorrow must drop their contributions on the drum, accompanied by their sworn statements that all representations and figures contained therein are, to their best knowledge and belief, true, correct and complete, so help them God, or God help them, because one false move and the hounds of Elmer Irey, of the intelligence unit, will be on them like a chicken on a June-bug and the grim, gray walls of Alcatraz will close them away from their dear ones, even as Al Capone.

Well, perhaps that is putting a too somber face on the matter, because, ordinarily, they don't mess with the Woolworth trade to the extent of criminal prosecutions and, moreover, my friends at the Treasury are a joyous lot of idealists who believe the new class of income tax payers will delight to make out returns and conceive it a patriotic pleasure to shower down on the due-day. But this is, nevertheless, a no-fooling income tax and it goes for all single-handed earners with no dependents, who collect as much as $750 a year, which is a weekly average of about $14.50, and all married persons with no dependents earning as much as $1500 a year.

THOSE WHO don't report and/or pay will be checked up and annoyed and threatened and probably some few flagrant offenders will be prosecuted just as examples and held up to the public scorn as slackers in time of war. Wage-earners who are steadily employed will have no convenient escape, but some casuals who go hop-scotching from job to job and place to place and from one occupation to another may escape the catch-polls.

Up to now, the income-tax amendment has been a piece of class legislation, but those days are gone forever. The income tax is now one of our most democratic institutions, and its importance as a producer of revenue will rise as wages rise in the fields of skilled or humble toil and the incomes dwindle of those who in the past were the fat cats and the favorite clients, or victims, of the Treasury.

This will call for systematic saving through the fiscal year in anticipation of March 15 and I cannot forbear to suggest that many citizens who have been paying as much as a tenth of their gross earnings to union racketeers for the privilege of living will now realize that old Sam, their loving uncle, is much less greedy.

A PICCOLO player, single and without dependents, earning $800 a year, will pay Sam only $3 toward a war to make the world safe for piccolo players, whereas he has been paying the racket 3 per cent of his gross, or $24, toward a fake unemployment benefit alone and as much again for the right not to be conked on the skull with a sawed-off pool cue for lese majesty to some greasy thief.

The piccolo player is going to reckon that if old Sam will give him a Government and fight a war for him for bucks three, then Sam ought to shoulder in and take the parasite off his neck. He is going to realize that all along Sam has regarded him as po-folks and is taxing him now only in desperate necessity to buy what it takes to fight a war and remember that during all these years when Sam was giving him a pass the gorilla in the union office was carrying bloody red hunks out of his poor scrawny flesh and lushing it up in the noisy dumps at night and feeding handpicked oats to his racing stock at the horse yards here and yon.

THE CARPENTER, building the barracks for the troops, is going to realize that the boards he spoils and the nails that he flings around so wastefully are not just "the Gov'ment's" but his lumber and nails and he isn't going to feel so indifferent either about commissions of $5000 or $50,000 paid to grafters posing as lawyers who act as lobbyists in Washington to get orders for contractors who add that loot to their bids. That graft will come out of the carpenter's hide and he will be just as alert to cases in which Communists or fellow-travelers are salted away in bureau jobs in Washington at $4000 or $6000 a year in the guise of "research secretaries" and "information specialists." If he gets as much as $80 a week and is single with no dependents he will be paying about $350 to old Sam and, if married, without dependents other than his devoted, if sometimes captious War Department, he will have to sweeten the pot to the extent of $240. He is going to want that money spent for Jap-killing and never mind the deserving ideologists.

It is almost too late for the new hands to start saving for their first experience. Due-day is only two months off and you have to get it up on time, but after March 16 the saving can start from scratch, so much a week or month, for Sam and home and country.

Dangerous Mission Rewarded

For braving bombs and gunfire from the air to halt the Nazi bombing of defenseless Belgrade last April, Col. Louis J. Fortier, United States Army, yesterday was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

The citation by Secretary of War Stimson revealed for the first time the important part played by this Government in bringing relief to the Yugoslav capital. Although Belgrade had been declared an open city, it was devastated by the Germans, bringing universal condemnation.

Col. Fortier, a native of Gretna, La., then military attache at Belgrade, was ordered to seek out the Yugoslav prime minister at Zvornika and the German authorities in Hungary to bring relief to the capital. For four days from April 8 to 12, he made his way through bombs and heavy fire to accomplish his mission.

In that time, declared the citation, "he drove through battle and devastated areas under frequent bombing and aerial machine-gun fire, and in order to enter Hungary traveled on horse, on foot and on a railroad section hand-car through 30 kilometers of the demolished zones."

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 16.—America's entrance into the war raises anew the question of the manner in which young men are selected for training in the Military and Naval Academies of West Point and Annapolis.

Although a few men are taken directly from the Regular Army or Navy each year, the great bulk of candidates for the two academies must obtain appointment from a Congressman in their area. A bill was introduced in Congress at the last session to change this system to permit the Secretary of War to fill vacancies at West Point without the usual routine of Congressional appointment. This bill passed the Senate, but was killed in the House.

Favor Direct Choices

The principle embodied in the bill is one which the great majority of American voters endorse. Nearly two-thirds of those polled in a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion believe that candidates for the Army or Navy academy should be allowed to apply directly, instead of having to rely on Congressional appointment.

To discover the country's attitude on this point, the Institute put the following issue to a vote among a cross-section of the population from coast to coast.

"Should young men who want to go to West Point or Annapolis be permitted to apply directly for entrance, or should they first be required to get an appointment from their Congressman, as at present?"

The results are:

Apply directly	68%
Apply through Congressman	18
No opinion	14

Many Congressmen have, in effect, tried to change the situation by carefully investigating the abilities of each applicant, and some even hold examinations to determine the best candidate to appoint from their district. It has been suggested that since examinations are sometimes given by Congressmen now, they might as well be given by the academies.

An earlier poll on the same issue was conducted by the Institute last August, with results closely similar to those in today's survey. The vote in August was 64 per cent in favor of direct application, 19 per cent in favor of application through Congressmen, and 17 per cent undecided.

Politics Shunned

In both surveys the desire of the majority to have these appointments placed on an open competitive basis stemmed from the belief that "politics" should not be a factor in military training; that many deserving young men might be overlooked because they do not have the right "pull or connections" and that the present system is not consistent with the "democratic way."

Some voters also contended that Congressmen were not as well qualified to judge good officer material as the military academies themselves.

Those who, on the other hand, approve of maintaining the present Congressional appointment method say that it insures selection of men with the right type of family background and keeps out "undesirable riff-raff."

Museum Provides Environs to Suit Most Ardent Moose

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

The Museum of Natural History here is leading the way in a new trend to show off the family to the best scientific advantage.

Yesterday it formally opened two mammoth dioramas on the building's second floor to show how families of moose and Stone's caribou look in home environment, but not, alas, how they act. For the four moose and three caribou were stuffed and, while appearing lifelike enough to have some family fun or fighting, were entirely unappreciative of the real-appearing Mount McKinley painted in the background and the very real and authentic stubble and rocks under their feet.

A bird called the whiskyjag, a sad-eyed affair of gray feathers, looked down from a wind-blasted tree admiringly on the bull moose, which stands seven feet high at the shoulders and has an antler spread of 65 inches. The bird is native to the Alaskan region where the moose were bagged by William N. Beach and J. Watson Webb, New York sportsmen. Besides authenticating the diorama landscape it lends majesty and oomph to the imposing size of the moose. Five members of the Alaska Game Commission beheld the diorama yesterday and said they thought they were home.

To obtain the specimen the sportsmen had to assemble a train of pack horses and much gear in Seattle because the area of destination was the almost inaccessible, wild, little-explored country north of Mount McKinley. Then, with specimens obtained, an amphibian plane had to be chartered to carry them from Tonzona in the interior to the coast. What they transported was the bull, a cow, a calf and a small bull, aside from the Stone's caribou, which float some noteworthy antlers of their own.

Difficulties didn't end even then, for in a glass case, with authenticity required, the mellowing influences and realities of love had to be considered in the blending of the moose into the landscape. It is a technical matter, but summed up, amounts to this:

There, together on apparently most amicable terms, were the old moose and the young bull, a situation impossible of existence during the mating season when one or another of the animals, depending on the strongest, would have been chased out of the landscape. So to have the happy amicability portrayed in the diorama the landscape had to be painted to the colorings of an appropriate season.

Which demonstrates nothing more nor less than that bringing back the moose isn't all scientists have to think about. They have to bring back their environment, too.

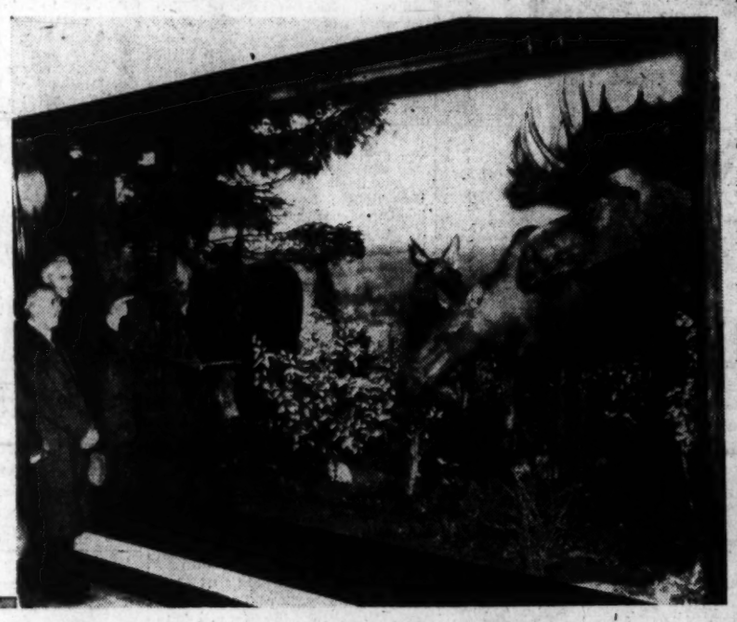
ALASKAN BULL MOOSE would probably think he was in native haunt if he wasn't stuffed. He is, however, in the realistic setting of a new diorama (below) at the Museum of Natural History along with other members of the moose family



Army Tests New Tropical Uniform

U. S. Army Signal Corps Photos

A NEW uniform to be worn by American troops in tropical climes was displayed for the first time yesterday at the Office of the Quartermaster General. Such garb will probably be in the pack of the next A. E. F. Features of the new outfit, created by the Q. M. C., are shorts, knit stockings, convertible shirt, and fiber helmet. Here Wallace R. Beamer, civilian employe of the Supply Division, O. Q. M. G., models the uniform. Sergt. C. E. Tipton examines the shirt collar, which resembles a sports-type when open, or regular dress when closed.

OLIVE-DRAB stockings of the new uniform may be worn folded beneath the knee or extended above for protection against sun and brambles when necessary. Adoption for general Army use of the outfit depends upon field tests now being made. Plans call for wearing of a low-quarter shoe where terrain permits, otherwise the regular service shoe. The pressed-fiber helmet which tops off the cotton-twill get-up is cloth covered. Brig. Gen. C. L. Corbin, chief of the Q. M. C.'s supply division, under whose supervision the clothes are made, is the inspecting officer. (An unofficial, but experienced observer called to The Post's attention the shortcomings of low-topped shoes and knit stockings for use in tropics where poisonous snakes abound. Shorts-clad British troops, it was pointed out, wear battle-boots or leggins.—Editor's note)

Mary Haworth's Mail

Couple's Conservative Marriage Plans Go Awry When Man Is Drafted by Army 'for the Duration;' Should They Wed to Ease Strain of Separation?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in love with a young man who has been drafted into the Army. When he left for camp we put aside our marriage plans until such time as he could complete his service. But now that the country is actually at war and we see no chance for a normal life together for years to come, we have almost decided to get married anyway. However, I feel we could profit by some disinterested counsel, and since I have great respect for your judgment, I am bringing our problem to you.

We are really quite conservative, cautious persons. In normal times we would never consider marriage without financial security. However, no one can foresee how long the war may last, nor how long a soldier may live—and we love each other so very dearly that we would like to share what we can, in the time we have.

There are so many "sound reasons" against marriage that I almost dread to set them down. But you must know them if you are to help us, so here they are: Bob is a private, making 20-odd dollars a month. He has no other source of income whatsoever, and no job awaiting him out of the Army. My own position is permanent and secure, and the salary is adequate for my support,—but no more. If we marry, we run the risk of having a child, no matter what precautions we may take. Bob's camp is some 300 miles from here, and if we were married I would continue to live at home with my family. We should see each other when I was able to arrange weekend trips, since furloughs are almost a thing of the past for him.

We have discussed all these things over and over and over again. But somehow they do not seem important in the face of our need of each other. The truth is, both of us are so concerned with our separation that I am afraid neither of us is being a very good soldier. And I sincerely believe that, with the knowledge of accomplished marriage to sustain and comfort us, we could both do greater justice to our jobs.

We have thought it only fair to tell our families what we want to do. They are of the opinion that we are old enough to make up our own minds and do what we think best. So I thought the best thing I could do right now was to get some advice from you. Therefore, I ask you: What, in your opinion, is the right thing for us to do? I am wondering what young people did in the last war. Did they make "war marriages?"—and what happened to them? Or did they wait and hope? And what then? Bob and I shall certainly appreciate your opinion and I hope we will be brave enough to accept it, whatever it may be. Sincerely,

SOLDIER'S GIRL.

Case of Worrying A Question Needlessly

DEAR S. G.: It seems to me that your fondness for discussing "What to do?"—a characteristic of "conservative, cautious persons"—is causing you to go on pretending you have an almost insuperably difficult choice to make here, when, actually, you have already tactily concurred on the appropriate decision, to-wit: to get married without further ado.

In the third paragraph of your letter, you portentously intone: "There are so many reasons against marriage that I almost dread to set them down." Then, after running through about as unremarkable and reassuring a set of socially definitive data as two long-time matrimonially minded, but suddenly war-encompassed young sweethearts could report, you suddenly recover your perspective to announce: "But somehow they do not seem important in the face of our need of each other." Right you are! And right again, when you say: "And I sincerely believe that, with the knowledge of accomplished marriage to sustain and comfort us, we could both do greater justice to our jobs."

In her question-and-answer column in the Ladies' Home Journal, Mrs. Roosevelt—whose great common sense and vast social experience give weight to all her opinions—some time ago lent philosophic approval to marriage in such circumstances: that is, in instances where temperamentally stable young persons had determined upon the step prior to war's rude interruption of normally planned lives.

She prudently intimated the difference between such courageous concession to emergency—designed to make the best of a bad situation,—and the generally ill-advised phenomenon of youngsters leaping into marriage with a virtual stranger, on the heels of a quick-blooming "wartime romance." I was particularly impressed by her quiet observation to the effect that marriage can minimize the tension of separation,—can, indeed, result in a sense of unity in absence,—for persons whose previously existing betrothal was based on long acquaintanceship and proven congeniality.

As for "what young people did in the last war"—if that is not a purely rhetorical question, designed to provoke further and more general indecisive discussion of your (to you) fascinatingly frustrating situation, then it is proof additional of your astoundingly "conservative" approach to life. It is probably one of the few instances on record of a member of the "younger generation" being willing (allegedly) to study the older generation's mistakes for the purpose of taking profit therefrom! However, if you really would like an oldster's report on what some of them did, that they shouldn't have done, and what the results and said oldster's regretful deductions were—turn back to my column of August 25, 1941.

On that date I published an introspective letter from a middle-aged man. Speaking from experience as a "gob" in the last war, he says he wishes some disinterested counselor had advised him, 20-odd years ago, to marry his school-day sweetheart before he embarked for France to make the world safe for democracy. As a result of deciding to postpone marriage until the war was over, and he could complete his college education and establish himself securely in a job, he lost her companionship for life,—a desolating fact he has mourned ever since, and expects to regret until he dies.

He says, in conclusion: "All this could have been prevented if I had married her at once and we had worked out our problems together. A pal of mine, at school and in the Navy, pursued that course, and today he is a prosperous, proud and happy family man. And I am glad for him and his good wife. The road is not easy. It presents many hardships and disappointments. But two youngsters blessed with love for, and faith in, each other, can make the grade and be happy while doing it." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Cinderella's Fur Slippers

Seems that Cinderella's slippers weren't glass after all. The story, an old Eastern legend, was translated into French in the seventeenth century and then into English, and the French word for the slippers—which were fur—was mistranslated . . . the word for fur was "vair" and the English translator got it mixed up with "verre" which meant glass. So there you are—Cinderella in English has worn glass slippers ever since. Fact is, I think the glass slippers are more glamorous anyway.

Practical for Play—Or Defense

Today's wartime slogan is to keep fit for defense. In keeping with this policy, you'll see more women going in for sports than ever before. Anticipating this fling in the fresh air—come summer—play togs are now on display. Designed for active sports, the new play suits are functional and flattering. This three-piece suit (shown below and at left) can double for a tailored dress. Made of crush-resistant koda-rep (a shantung type woven with Eastman acetate rayon), it comes in the new "Amigo Mio" Latin-American colors. The deep-throated shirt has contrasting sleeves to match hip-to-hem-line pockets in shorts and big patch pockets in the skirt

Flame Retardant Saves Fabrics From Fire Hazard

The home and everyone in it can now be safeguarded from fire hazards by flame-proofing clothing and household fabrics with a chemical as simple to apply, in most cases, as a starchy rinse on wash day.

Such all-too-common causes of fire as sparks falling on filmy window curtains, smoking in bed, or dropping lighted cigarettes behind couch cushions will no longer start a blaze if flammable textiles are treated with the new fire retardant. Then the fabric merely chars upon contact with flame, but will not burn or support combustion.

Little girls' frilly party frocks, sheer negligees, velvet evening gowns, draperies, mattress coverings, upholstery, and rugs—all may be flame-proofed by dipping or spraying with the chemical, which is obtainable in convenient cans. Fabrics immersed in a solution of 1 pound of the crystalline powder to 1 gallon of water, and then dried, will remain incapable of supporting fire until laundered, after which the treatment is easily repeated. Dry-cleaning does not remove the fire protection quality nor appreciably impair it.

The fabric looks and feels the same as before it was treated. Only an expert—or a flame—can tell the difference.

This new flame-proofing chemical, known technically as ammonium sulfamate, was a laboratory curiosity until three years ago. Scarcely one practical use was previously found and all known methods of producing it were prohibitively costly.

Then, the experimental station of the Dupont Co., in Wilmington, Del., developed an economical way of making sulfamic acid, from which the fire retardant is derived.

Children in Wartime

This is one of a series of parents' questions answered by the Child Study Association of America in its booklet, "Children in Wartime."

Learning to Obey

The Air Raid Warden in our apartment house has issued some directions which I question. And I am troubled, too, about some of the emergency regulations in force at my child's school. Must I see that my family obeys the rules when I really doubt their wisdom?

If each one of us attempts to make his own rules, serious confusion and danger to the whole community will inevitably result. In an emergency some official plan, by which everyone is guided, is of utmost importance. If you are not satisfied that the present rules are the best possible, it is your democratic privilege, as well as your obligation, to make suggestions for their improvement to the responsible authorities. But whether or not your suggestions are accepted, it is imperative that you obey and teach your children to obey. Conforming to the regulations is essential for the common safety. Having such regulations for our welfare made by our own representatives is of the essence of democracy. Our way of meeting the emergency is a test of democratic morale.

Most of us have lived in a world which made few demands on us for strict obedience and many of us have brought up our children under a system of discipline in which obedience played a minor role. It takes some readjusting for us to accept authority so unquestioningly now, and to help our children to do the same. This doesn't mean that our way was the wrong way. On the contrary, our kind of discipline is needed to create free people for a free society. But the present situation is a test of our adaptability. To no small degree our own readiness and willingness to make this adjustment will determine the ease with which our children do their part.

If You Can't Do Extra Work You're Not Fit

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW FIT are you? Can you walk 5 miles an hour? Do you puff when you climb stairs? Finally can you take extra work in your stride or do you pay for it with a let-down the next day?

Such simple tests of physical endurance would scarcely have disturbed our pioneers on the distaff side, but they are quite beyond some of our softened-up modern women. If you can't pass them, you need to get in trim.

One of the best conditioners is walking—something we are going to do more and more. The first step, however, is to give up the idea of wearing high heels for practically everything. High heels are for vanity, not distance, and should be saved for dressing up. We are still going to dress up and look our prettiest!

The Right Shoes

What you need for general wear is a good pair of workaday shoes. They should be strong and should fit snugly about the arch and instep, but there should be plenty of toe room. The rule for room also applies to your stockings, which should be half an inch longer than your foot. Too short stockings cramp your toes. Your walking heels should be medium low and broad, and if most of your walking is done on hard sidewalks and pavements the heels should have rubber lifts to absorb some of the jar.

Those of you who have almost lived in high heels should not try to shift suddenly to heels that are flat. After all, your muscles and ligaments have been trained to support your weight in a pitched-forward position, and an abrupt change—even to the normal position—may cause pain and discomfort. It would be better to climb down off your high heels gradually. Start with heels that are slightly lower and after a week or so have them lowered a bit more. A good shoe fixer can take care of this for you.

This may sound like too much bother when you really feel more comfortable in high heels. But you are just walking into trouble! If your feet are strong, high heels are fine—for special occasions. But your feet are forced into an abnormal position, and eventually you will pay for it. Not only will your feet suffer, but your entire body may be affected. When you are pitched forward your hips and knees are thrown out of their proper alignment and the consequences may be displacement of the organs, strain of the muscles, nervous disturbance and habitual fatigue. You are working at a disadvantage which makes you tire easily.

Having settled the shoe question, watch your walk. For efficiency's sake, make a habit of pointing the toes straight ahead and throwing the weight to the outer borders. When you toe out, the weight is thrown to the inner border of the foot and the arch is weakened.

Anyone can walk. It's the one exercise that costs nothing. And if you will walk every day, starting out with one mile, then two, and gradually increasing your distance, you will soon be able to clip off your 5 miles an hour without a wheeze. When you can do that you'll notice that you don't pant when you climb stairs and that extra work comes much easier.

Spoon Was First Food Utensil

One of the oldest known utensils for handling food is the spoon. Originally made of horn or bone and wood, the spoon has also from early times been made of precious metals, as well as of pewter, bronze, and other materials. They have varied greatly in shape and curve, which makes the study of spoons a fascinating one. Roman spoons were elaborately ornamented.

In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, sets of 13 spoons with the figures of the Apostles on the handles were highly regarded and are the subject of much interest to antiquarians today. Another interesting type of spoon was the funeral spoon which had a coffin shaped handle—these spoons were given out to friends helping at a burial. Every different time and section has produced interesting characteristic spoons.

"WHAT sort of a dancer is he?" "Oh just so-so." Let's hope the girls don't say that about you!

For without stirring a step from home you can get the benefit of a really expert dancing teacher, Lawrence Hostetler, noted dance instructor, has made photographs and diagrams showing all the popular steps in a booklet.

The girls also learn from Mr. Hostetler! You'll tango, conga and rumba, too—with our 40-page booklet. "Learn to Dance the Photo-Footprint Way." Has diagrams and 50 splendid photographs to show you the basic steps and variations, including the waltz, fox-trot, slow fox-trot, Peabody, Lindy.

Send 15 cents in coin for our booklet, "Learn to Dance the Photo-Footprint Way," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Stockings for Walking

WITH the present necessity for walking, the problem of proper hose arises. A business woman writes, "I am walking back and forth to work—walking, not hiking or climbing mountains—and I want to wear the proper stockings. Sheer stockings encourage callouses on my feet. Yet, I must have hose that are comfortable indoors. Should I buy wool stockings and change them when I get to work, or wear anklets?"

Even though these are chilly days, hosiery buyers discredit the idea of wearing wool stockings to work because they are so bothersome to change. While anklets would pass on a cold day, they, too, would have to be removed at the office. One hosiery buyer suggests that there are available plain lisle hose at about $1 a pair, which are ideal worn with a coat, suit or sport tweeds.

There are also mesh styles of lisle that are a little more expensive. Lisle wears well—even though it does not compare in durability with nylon stockings. Cotton hose are now being worn at work, as well as for walking. If one were accustomed to wearing lisle stockings for walking, a change to nylon or silk could be made for dress without discomfort.

Are 'All Hats 'Beanies'?

A YOUNG WOMAN who is facing the problem of buying a new spring hat writes: "What type of a hat can a woman wear who does not look well in off-the-face hats? Practically every style hat I have seen is to be worn with a pompadour. Are there to be any hats shadowing the face—sailors or brimmed hats? Or will they all be beanies and bonnets?"

Beanie and calot varieties will be very popular types of hats this spring, but they will by no means be the only shapes shown. Sailors and larger hats in felt and straw are to be two of the most important styles.

Sailors shown this year have more verve, however, than the severe Gibson Girl types. They may swoop up on one side or have some detail to make them dressier. Others have a dip in front and some are attached to snoods—proving that not all hats entirely reveal the hair.

Larger hats abound in all shapes. Some crowns are high and others are low. The wider the brim, the lower the crown—as a rule. Many of the brims curl down or dip forward, for those who do not like the styles that are to be worn back on the head.

Long Torso Problem

A WOMAN in her thirties who is built on generous proportions about the hips is disheartened by the slim sheath and long-torso silhouettes. She wants to know what styles there are for figures like her's. She writes: "Every dress I have seen seems to have a lowered hipline—just the thing to accentuate hippiness."

Although the long-torso silhouette prevails in the majority of spring styles, there are many varieties of the old favorite, the shirtwaist dress. This dress is predicted to be popular this spring in "dressed-up" styles—both for daytime and evening—and would be becoming.

The old "center of interest" theory, that a woman should not try to hide her bad points without drawing attention to some other spot, applies especially in this instance. It is not wise to try to hide the hips by a loosely fitted skirt without drawing attention to other parts of the body. One suggestion is to raise the waistline. Another is to call attention to the bustline—if the bust is not too large. By comparison with long torsos the waistline of the shirtwaist dress appears to be high. Many shirtwaist styles are also available in the plunging V-type neckline with modified lapels.

What Men Think Of Women's Styles.

By Harry F. Dirlam

This is one of a series on what men in varied fields think of women's clothes.

Harry F. Dirlam, New York businessman, here gives his slant on women's fashions.

BEFORE fully expressing myself as to what I think of the girls, I must honestly confess women's fashions have always intrigued me.

Today, as in ages past, woman's primary reason for self-adornment has been to attract the opposite sex. The manner in which they conduct this unceasing (advertising) campaign, I, as a business man, have viewed with amazement.

There are, however, a number of incongruities that puzzle me. Women seem so upset and anxious to avoid meeting men when afflicted with runs in their stockings and gaps in their dresses. While such fastidiousness is an extremely laudable virtue, we men do not always hold such "accidents" against the ladies, realizing that the average girl of today leaves her home perfectly groomed. After running the gauntlet of a crowded subway she is to be congratulated if she emerges with nothing worse than a run in her stockings.

What to me is more to be deplored is the modern style in footwear—the peeping toes and the backless heels that slide from side to side and raise such a clatter as the fair wearer strides along.

Women's hats have caused a great deal of discussion—they leave me speechless. Every girl that comes along raises an interesting question: What is that thing on her head and what is it made of? Did she buy it that way or was it an accident? However, we men must admit that the fantastic curls and hats today give a certain individuality and are far more attractive than the monotonous shapes and hair-dos of years ago.

With full realization of the acrimony that may be heaped upon me by not only my own family but friends as well, I really do believe the girls of today have better looking legs than those of the last generation. I want to be fair—this is possibly due to the beautiful sheer stockings that are at the command of any girl today. Facial make-up, too, has outgrown the crudeness of the past, and today it adds a great deal to the general attractiveness. On the other hand, the length of their fingernails brings to my mind the claws of a charging tiger. It would not surprise me if many a potential suitor was repulsed, instead of attracted, by such adornment.

In conclusion, the girls of today are refreshing and exceptionally resourceful. As far as I am concerned, the only real improvement I can suggest is strict attention to the cards when playing bridge. Mere man becomes completely bewildered and dismayed when the conversation of his fair and gentle partness drifts to fashions and beauty parlor gossip.

Capitalites Await Full Social Slate

Mr. and Mrs. Haas Feted at Brilliant Dinner Given by W. S. Culbertsons

By Patricia Grady

Capitalites are getting out their datebooks these days and scribbling in lunch, cocktail and dinner engagements with a rapidity that astounds even the old-time Washingtonians who lived through the boom of the last war. Yesterday's calendar boasted a succession of parties, large and small, and the social line-up for this weekend—what with three full-fledged diplomatic receptions on the books for this afternoon—is a guarantee that the morale in the war Capital is unshaken.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Haas, of San Francisco, who are staying at the Hay-Adams for a few days, have been the inspiration for a number of parties, among them the dinner which Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson gave in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue last evening. Mrs. Haas, who is a top-flight San Francisco hostess and leader of things musical in the West Coast city, is the beautiful dark-eyed niece of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer. She and her husband expect to return to California shortly.

Knoxes Ranking Guests at Dinner

Ranking guests at the Culbertson dinner last night were the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox. Also present were J. W. Maillard, jr., and Charles Page, who made the eastward trek from San Francisco with Mr. and Mrs. Haas. Others on the out-of-town dinner list were Mr. and Mrs. John Slater, of New York; Mrs. Howard Davidson, who recently returned from Hawaii; Mrs. Henry F. Grady, of San Francisco, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Luckenbill, of New York, the son-in-law and daughter of the hosts. Mrs. Luckenbill has been visiting in the Capital since Christmas and will return to New York with her husband tomorrow. Completing the guest list were Lieut. and Mrs. William S. Maillard.

Today Mrs. Haas will be the guest of honor at an impromptu luncheon in the east room of the Mayflower Hotel at which Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who has been widely feted herself since her arrival in Washington before Christmas, will be the hostess. Among those attending will be Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Chief Justice; Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister; Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister; Mme. Hassan, wife of the Egyptian Minister; Mme. Loudon, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands; Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister; Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Emory S. Land, and Mrs. Oscar Chapman.

Mrs. Souby, Mrs. Elmes Expected to Attend

Others who will come in to greet the San Francisco honor guest and hostess will be Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. Albert Carter, Mrs. Harold Bowen, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Mrs. George Rublee, Mrs. Edwin Dickinson, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Fred Livesay, Miss Minerva Bernardino, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mrs. Albert Cox, Mrs. Chapin Huntington and Mrs. A. Manuel Fox.

Still others there will be Mrs. James Souby and her house guest from New York, Mrs. Cecil Elmes, in whose honor Mrs. Souby will entertain at a dinner this evening, Mrs. E. G. Nourse, Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. May Thompson Evans, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Miss Maxine Davis, Mrs. Henry Deimel, Mrs. Frank Waring, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Frank Bohn, Mrs. J. Marcellus Woodward, Mrs. Robert Carr, Mrs. Ann Johnstone, Mrs. Esther Brunauer, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Guilford Jameson, Mrs. Bulkley Griffen, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Miss Mary Johnson, of New York; Mrs. Helen Montfort Moodie and Mrs. Loyle A. Morrison.

Mary Jane Stanley Honored at Luncheon

Parties on yesterday's crowded calendar included the luncheon given by Mrs. Frank Wideman in honor of Miss Mary Jane Stanley, the small luncheon at which Mrs. Amory Perkins, of Middleburg, Va., entertained in La Salle du Bois, and the luncheon in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue at which Mrs. Emerson Howe feted Mrs. John Allen Dougherty's New York house guest, Mrs. Fenton B. Turck.

Miss Stanley has been in the midst of a round of parties since her engagement to Cary Euwer was announced last fall. Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley have put the invitations to their daughter's wedding in the mail. The ceremony will take place February 7 in St. Alban's Church. Guests at Mrs. Wideman's luncheon in her home on Woodley Road included Mrs. Stanley, the bride-elect's mother; Mrs. Bennett Crain, of Mount Victoria, Md.; Mrs. John Stanley, of Laurel, Md.; Miss Betty Mills, of Baltimore, and the Misses Peggy and Frances Stanley, of Washington.

Richard Bailey Takes Bride At St. Paul's

Candle light shown on waxwhite lilies and the burnished green of palms which formed the background for the marriage last evening of Miss Evelyn Bodenstein and Richard Dana Bailey at St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Henry W. Snyder, and the Rev. Snyder read the vows for the marriage. Edward C. Kunz, grandfather of the bride, gave her in marriage. A long train fell from the full skirt of her traditional white satin bridal gown. Her veil was also quite long and featured a face veil. She carried a bouquet of Easter lilies.

Her sister, Miss Ann Bodenstein, maid of honor, was gowned in white taffeta and lace and carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses. Gowned like the maid of honor were the bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Bailey, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Lucy Abbott, Miss Sally Winn and Mrs. Wyatt C. Garrett. They wore white floral veils and carried bouquets at American Beauties. Flower girl was Babs Garrett.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Orin Porter Bailey, of Washington, had his brother, Stuart L. Bailey, as best man, and ushers were Frederick E. Brown, Wyatt C. Garrett, John T. Raines and Henry W. Snyder, jr. Palms and cut flowers decorated Kirklawn, the parsonage of the church, for the reception. Rhinestones on pale blue crepe featured the gown worn by the bride's mother, while Mrs. Bailey, mother of the bridegroom, wore crepe in an ocean spray shade of green with sequins glittering on its top. Both mothers had orchids.

For traveling the bride chose a wool dress trimmed in white to wear under a black coat. Her corsage was gardenias. After their wedding trip the couple will live in Washington.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bogia, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Richter and J. Herbert Todd, all of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Bye, of Newark, Del., and Mr. and Mrs. George Stergler, of Wilmington, Del.

Canadian Envoy Gives Luncheon

Guests included Sir Wilmott Lewis; the counselor of the legation, Merchant Mahoney; Ernest K. Lindley, Charles Hurd and Ray Henle.

Mrs. Embick Greets Friends At Informal Cocktail Party

The blaze flickering and crackling in the fireplace and Laddie, the gray skye terrier, guarding the hearth gave an air of coziness to the party yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Stanley D. Embick, wife of Lieut. Gen. Embick, gathered in a few friends for cocktails between the hours of dusk and darkness. It was the first in a series of informal parties planned by Mrs. Embick.

Receiving in the drawing room of their home at 3701 Thirty-third Place, the hostess was gowned in a street-length frock of dusty rose crepe, fashioned with lingerie touches of white at the neckline. With it she wore a double strand of pearls and matching earrings.

Centering the dining table was a gay bouquet of mixed flowers in bright colors, and similar bouquets in low jade bowls were used in the drawing room. Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Paul Stanley Bond, Mrs. William P. Kitts, Mrs. Samuel Mackall and Mrs. Hanson B. Black.

Generally assisting and seeing to it that guests were plied with viands and drink was Mrs. Frank H. Hastings, wife of Col. Hastings, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Embick. Also assisting was the Embicks' other daughter, Mrs. Albert Wedemeyer, wife of Col. Wedemeyer. Mrs. Hastings was chicly turned out in blue and Mrs. Wedemeyer had chosen a smart black suit with touches of white for accent. Incidentally the dog, Laddie, was brought back from Berlin a few years ago by Albert and Robin, the two Wedemeyer sons, who had been presented with him during their father's tour of duty there. Laddie used to sit up and salute every time he heard the phrase "Heil Hitler," but has since been definitely Americanized.

By far the favorite topic of the afternoon was Red Cross work and war work, and most of the guests, although up to their ears already in war work of some kind or another, were trying to figure out how they could wedge in just a bit more on their crowded schedules. Even the busiest of housewives have taken to knitting at every spare moment.

An animated group including Mrs. W. H. Carter, Mrs. Olive Spaulding, wife of Gen. Spaulding, and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, were discussing one of the latest Red Cross problems, which seems to be how to get bandage material shipped in fast enough to keep up with the energetic women who work as bandage rollers.

Luncheon Honors Mrs. J. G. Vivian

Mrs. H. O. Plugge entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham in honor of Mrs. John D. Vivian, of Duluth, Minn. Mrs. Vivian is visiting here with her daughter, Mrs. John Ade Plugge, in Chevy Chase. Covers were laid for 17.

Among the other guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Edward G. Bush, Wayne, Pa., and Mrs. John S. West, of Philadelphia, who are guests of Mrs. Plugge at her home on Connecticut Avenue.

Stag Dinner At Legation Fetes Masaryk

Entertaining at a stag dinner, the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia feted Jan Masaryk, minister of foreign affairs of the republic, last night at the legation. Today the visitor will be honor guest at a reception to be given by the Hurbans and tomorrow the Czech colony has been invited to a party in his honor.

Guests at last night's party included the Ambassador of Poland, Jan Ciechanowski; the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Maxim Litvinoff; the Minister of Yugoslavia, Constantin Fotich; the Minister of Switzerland, Charles Bruggmann; Senator Tom Connally, Senate Claude Pepper, Senator Lister Hill, Senator Scott W. Lucas and Representative Adolf Sabath.

Still others in the gathering were Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, Chief of Protocol George T. Summerlin, the Chief of the European Division, Ray Atherton; Wilbur J. Carr, Leo Pasvolsky, Adlai T. Stevenson, Joseph C. Rovensky, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator at the Smithsonian Institute; Walter Lippmann, Edgar Mowerer, Minister Jan Pananek, the Counselor of the Czech Legation; Karl Cervenka and the Military Attache, Col. Oldrich Spaniel.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark have as their guest, Mrs. E. E. Pershall, of St. Louis, Mo., who arrived here from New York recently. Yesterday Mrs. Clark entertained at an informal luncheon for her house guest. The latter will leave tomorrow for her home.

Senator and Mrs. Josiah Bailey are spending the weekend in Wilmington, N. C., where their daughter, Edith, will sponsor the launching of the S. S. Nathaniel Green at the shipyards there today. They were accompanied by Miss Daisy Davidson, of Alexandria, Va.; Miss Barbara Green, of Washington, and another daughter, Miss Sally Bailey. Miss Davidson and Miss Green will be maids of honor at the launching. All will return to Washington Monday.

Jack Segar is in Richmond, Va., where he will serve as an usher at the wedding today of Miss Edith Wilbin and Lieut. Alexander Hamilton Sands, jr. While in Richmond he will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. William Dunn. He will return to Washington tomorrow.

Mrs. James Irving Steele, of Pennsylvania, who is spending the winter in Washington, entertained several members of the Wesley Heights Dancing Club at the Ballet Theater Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Elgin, of Chevy Chase, Md., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, born January 13 in Georgetown Hospital. The child is their second boy. He had been named Lawrence Allnutt Elgin.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Saks will entertain at dinner this evening in their home on Woodley Road.

Mrs. Ira Stern, of Richmond, Va., is spending the week-end with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fischer at the Park Tower Apartments.

Miss Simmons To Be Married

The Shrine of Sacred Heart Church will be the scene of the marriage tonight of Miss Patricia Marie Simmons, daughter of John F. Simmons and Mrs. Ruth Sanders Simmons, to John Francis Clancy. Msgr. James A. Smyth will officiate for the ceremony at 6:30 o'clock.

Miss Simmons is the granddaughter of Mrs. Stanley B. Simmons, of Washington, with whom she has made her home. She is a graduate of Sacred Heart Academy here. Her maid of honor will be Miss Patsy Gavan Roch, and her matron of honor, Mrs. Alden Towberman. Miss Mary Elizabeth Penn will be bridesmaid.

The bridegroom was born and educated in New York City and after being graduated from St. Michel's School there, he came to Washington and is now in the clerical department of Foreign Service of the Navy. His parents are deceased. His brother, Philip Clancy, will be best man at the wedding. Ushers will be Paul Davis, Thomas Flynn, Charles Lempke and Benjamin S. Simmons.

The reception is to be at Hotel 2400 at 7 o'clock in the French and Red Rooms. Both grandmothers of the bride, Mrs. Simmons and Mrs. George Sanders, will be in the receiving line.

Mr. Clancy has two sisters, Mrs. Elmer Wallace, of Washington, and Mrs. Walter Buckley, of Charleston, W. Va. Both will attend their brother's wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Fahy, of Rockford, Ill., aunt and uncle of the bride, will be among the out-of-town guests. Mrs. Fahy was also a Washington bride, but shortly after her marriage moved to Rockford, where Mr. Fahy practices law.

The couple will leave immediately after the reception for a short honeymoon trip. After January 25 they will be at home at 1420 Harvard Street.

David Dickerson Weds Miss Margaret De Moll

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Joseph De Moll have sent announcements of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Ruth De Moll, to David L. Dickerson on Saturday, January 3, in Alexandria, Va.

The wedding was orginally planned for January 24 and the date was changed because Mr. Dickerson was recalled to the Army. After their honeymoon in Williamsburg, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson will be at home at 5253 Nebraska Avenue in Chevy Chase.

Stabells Greet Friends at Gay Cocktail Party

The Second Secretary of the Norwegian Legation and Mme. Stabell entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of Mme. Per Dogh-Henriksen, who is the house guest of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman at her home, Uplands, on Foxhall Road. Mrs. Stabell, who is American-born and Mme. Dogh-Henriksen, also an American, have been friends for a good many years.

Mrs. Dogh-Henriksen will leave tomorrow for New York to join her husband, who is here for the "duration." On Thursday her sister, Miss Ann Boardman, entertained at cocktails in her honor.

Yellow roses and mimosa were used throughout the house for yesterday's party and the hostess received wearing a spring-like green and white printed frock. Among the invited guests were the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Undersecretary of War and Mrs. Robert Patterson, the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation and Mme. Galbe, the Military Attache, Col. Oscar Klingenberg, the Naval Attache and Mme. Askin, the Counselor of the Czech Legation and Mme. Cervenka, the Attache of the Chinese Embassy and Mme. Kwong, the Attache of the Australian Legation and Mrs. Wilson Ewart, the Military Attache of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wessell, Miss Carolyn Nash, the Counselor of the Danish Legation and Mme. Brun, George Abell and Maj. Juan Cedillo.

Berniece Johnson Becomes Bride Of Galmage Fink

The rectory of Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Bethesda, Md., was the scene of the wedding late yesterday of Miss Berniece Marian Johnson, to Galmage Grayson Fink.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Burton Foster, of Bethesda, Md., and was given in marriage by Mr. Foster, with the Rev. John Sweeney officiating for the 5:30 o'clock ceremony. Her dress was of royal blue bengaline, which she wore with black kid accessories and gardenias.

Miss Mildred L. Coleman, her maid of honor, wore gold crepe with brown. Her flowers were talisman roses. Mr. Fink, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Fink, of Glen Echo Heights, Md., had Bernard Brashears for his best man, and Otha Fink ushered.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Hampden Lane home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Foster chose an aqua crepe for receiving the guests, and her flowers were yellow roses. Mrs. Fink was gowned in navy blue crepe and wore red roses. The couple will reside at 33 Carroll Avenue in Takoma Park.

Refugees' War Sale Planned

Have you any old clothes, furniture, odds-and-ends and bric-a-brac you'd like to get rid of? If so, here's your chance. A group of prominent Washington women are working hours on end to complete plans for a rummage sale to take place on Friday of next week. Funds will go to war refugees in England, and the sale will be held at 1218 Connecticut Avenue.

The group, of which Mrs. George Barnett is chairman and Mrs. Wilbur Carr is vice chairman, is soliciting contributions of all salable items and is asking that such be sent to them not later than Thursday. Duncan Phillips, who owns the building at 1218 Connecticut Avenue, which happens to be vacant for a few days, has turned the first floor over to the committee for the sale.

Mrs. Carlton Holdrege is head of the committee in charge of the sale and a distinguished group is assisting her. An emergency executive committee meeting will be held at Anderson House Monday morning when plans for the sale will be completed.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Be Hostess At Tea Monday

In behalf of the Diamond Jubilee celebration of the President's birthday, Mrs. Roosevelt will inaugurate "Women's Week for Infantile Paralysis" on Monday by being hostess at a meeting and tea to a group of women at the White House.

Speakers, besides the First Lady, will include Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States; Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. William Kletzer, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Miss Dorothy Ducas, national chairman of the women's division of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday.

Among the guests who have been invited are Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Lady Halifax, Mme. T. V. Soong, Mme. Loudon, Mrs. Richard G. Casey, Mrs. Leighton McCarthy, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Frank C. Walker, Mrs. Frank Knox, Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, Mrs. Jesse Jones and Miss Frances Perkins.

Still others who will attend are Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Hugo F. Black, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. Owen J. Voters' Unit Holds 'War' Conference

District Women's League Seeks to Further Gear Up Defense Program

The board of the District League of Women Voters held an emergency conference yesterday to discuss ways of further gearing its program to wartime.

Although final action will follow two other board meetings next week, the group began yesterday to consider whether the local league can carry out the national organization's plan for interpreting current issues more widely to the public.

At yesterday's meeting held at the Brookings Institution, Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president of the District League, reported on the national council meeting which she attended in Indianapolis, January 8-9. The League of Women Voters at that meeting committed itself to reaching a larger public, and stressed the vital need of attention to local government "whose importance is often underrated in normal times" and in danger of eclipse in war time, it was stated.

The board of the local league yesterday discussed the possibility of enlisting and training its members to lead neighborhood discussion on groups on such public issues as inflation, price control, taxation and the defense set-up in the District.

Speakers Bureau Is Discussed

A speakers' bureau and the issuing of broadsides were among other methods discussed yesterday as possibilities in the local league's "public intelligence service," as Mrs. Callaghan termed it.

The league is qualified to perform a distinctive service as guardians of democracy, in aiding citizens' understanding of government, Mrs. Callaghan said.

The plans under discussion would extend the league's services to the public, open up avenues of study and disseminate information to citizens, she said.

Mrs. Harold Stone made a report yesterday on the distribution of population in the District, and Mrs. Harold Krogh discussed the distribution of the league's 500 members in the study of the suggestions for neighborhood discussion groups.

Mrs. Eugene Dunfield, program chairman for the league, discussed its program for the current year.

Meetings Slated On Tax Study

The tax study, which is being sponsored jointly by the department of government and its operation and by the department of economic welfare, will be discussed at a series of meetings beginning next Tuesday at league headquarters, it was announced.

Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, chairman of these departments, are being assisted in the tax study by a committee including Mrs. B. M. McKelway, Mrs. C. S. Duncan, Mrs. James Jackson, Mrs. A. B. Herman, Mrs. Ann Page, Mrs. Walter Clark, Mrs. Charles Weston, Mrs. Charles Dearing, Mrs. Joseph Low, Mrs. Howard Nichols and Mrs. Terry Foster.

The board will hold another meeting Monday and a third session next Friday to continue discussion of the expanded wartime program.

English Author To Talk Here

"The Preservation of Art Treasures in Britain" will be discussed by Eric Underwood, English author and director of the national trust for preservation of historic spots in that country, at the meeting of William Woodward Chapter, Colonial Dames of the Seventeenth Century, next Saturday afternoon.

The meeting will be in the studio of the District Branch, National League of American Pen Women, at 2 p. m. Mr. Underwood will also show the Colonial Dames a part of his collection of old English silver spoons.

Hostesses for the day will be Miss Martha Lou Houston, second vice president, and Mrs. Oscar Linwood Layton, registrar, assisted by Mrs. William Walton Badgley, Mrs. Samuel Payne Cashell, Miss Minerva Gertrude Culton, Mrs. Cornelius DeWeese and Mrs. Andrew Joseph Sanford.

Serving at the tea table will be the officers: Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., recording secretary; Dr. Ruth Emma Coyner, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Minnie Ashbrook Tull, treasurer; Miss Julia Theckea Macmillan, historian; Mrs. William Wallace Holt, chaplain, and Mrs. Shelton Bainbridge Lamar, chairman of the committee on genealogical records.

League Discusses Wartime Program

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Eugene Callaghan (center), president of the District League of Women Voters, reported at a board meeting yesterday on the wartime program which the national organization has proposed for disseminating information on current issues more widely to the public. A.W.V.S. Plans Lecture Series On Gardening

A series of lectures on home gardening will be started by the American Women's Voluntary Services at its headquarters February 3, it was announced yesterday.

Plans are being developed by Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, chairman of the agriculture and nutrition section of A. W. V. S.; Mrs. Starling Burgess, chairman of the home gardens division and Mrs. Chase Donaldson, her assistant.

Called a project of the "victory garden" program, the courses will be designed to popularize home gardening as a contribution to nutrition, as well as for the morale-building and physical benefits of the outdoor work.

The course will begin at 2 p. m. February 3 at the A. W. V. S. office, 2170 Florida Avenue. The course is open to persons who have facilities for applying what they learn in the course. There is a possibility of a similar course being given at night for applicants who cannot attend in daytime.

Lecturers for the series will include B. Y. Morrison, W. H. Youngman, Dr. Roy Magruder, L. W. Kephart, Miss Lelia Ogle and Miss Miriam Birdseye, all of the Department of Agriculture; J. Morton Franklin, horticultural consultant; Mrs. Doretta Klaber and Miss Cary Millholland, landscape architects.

Smith College Alumnae to Give Newcomers Tea

A newcomers' tea to welcome Smith College graduates who have come to Washington in recent months will be given by Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, alumnae trustee of the college, at her home, 1908 Twenty-third Street Northwest, Tuesday from 4 to 6:30 p. m.

Receiving with Mrs. Huntington will be Mrs. Keith Kane, of Washington, who is national president of the Smith College Alumnae Association, and Mrs. George Eddy, president of the Smith Club in the District of Columbia.

Present club officers and former presidents will assist at the tea table. They are Mrs. Vernon H. Brewster and Mrs. F. J. Libby, former president; Mrs. Kenneth Holland, Mrs. Guy McKinney, Mrs. Llewellyn O. Thomas and Mrs. Ray Pettingill.

Two national directors of the Smith College Alumnae Association will assist in welcoming the guests, Mrs. Thomas Eliot and Mrs. John W. Guider.

D. A. R. to Hear Mrs. C. A. Cooke

Col. James McCall Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will honor Mrs. Claude Allen Cooke, who has served as State registrar for the past two years, at a reception Thursday at the Chapter House from 9 to 11 p. m.

Sharing honors with Mrs. Cooke will be other State officers and Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, chairman of filing and lending bureau committee.

Monticello Chapter will meet at 2 p. m. today at the home of Mrs. Ferd T. Schneider, with Mrs. Thomas Smith and Mrs. R. C. Schulte as assisting hostesses. Mrs. Roger Williams, past State registrar and former chapter regent, will speak and will lead the chapter in questions on D. A. R. activities.

Democratic Club Will Fete Mason

"Wartime Washington" will be discussed by Commissioner Guy Mason, speaker and honor guest, at the "Information Hour" luncheon of the Women's National Democratic Club Monday at 12:30 at the clubhouse.

Mrs. Garland Ferguson will introduce the speaker and Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the club, will preside. Hostesses will be Mrs. Emmett Gudger, Mrs. Charles Brand, Mrs. Frederic Halstead and Mrs. Philip Dodson.

Peoples Mandate Group Meets in N. Y. Tomorrow

Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the Peoples Mandate, Dr. Esther Neira de Calvo and Mrs. Carl Hugo Farman will leave for New York tomorrow to attend a meeting of the mandate committee which will be held Monday morning at the Cosmopolitan Club.

Dr. Calvo, chairman of the Peoples Mandate in Panama, has been in the United States for several months speaking before women's organizations. Mrs. Farman, who is a citizen of Chile, is head of one of the Latin-American committees of the Peoples Mandate.

Other mandate chairmen from Latin America attending the meeting are Senora Angela Acuna de Chacon, of Costa Rica, and Senorita Marina Nunéz del Prado, the Bolivian sculptor, who are now in New York.

W. R. C. to Honor Grand Army Chief

The Department of the Potomac, Woman's Relief Corps, Auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, will give a reception and tea in honor of George A. Gay, of Nashua, N. H., and May L. Luchsinger, of Monroe, Wis., national president of the Women's Relief Corps, Sunday afternoon at 146 Uhland Terrace Northeast.

Mr. Gay is national commander of the G. A. R. Miss Sarah Lynch, president of Kit Carson Corps, assisted by members of the corps, and Mrs. Anna Horn, department chairman of the executive board, have charge of arrangements for the reception, it was announced by Mrs. Myrtle L. Burke, president of the department.

Arlington Garden Club

B. Y. Morrison, of the Department of Agriculture, will speak at the meeting of the Neighborhood Garden Club of Arlington at 8 p. m. Monday at the home of Mrs. Frances A. Ward. An exhibit will deal with winter gardens.

D.A.R. Defense Chairman Due Here Jan. 29

Plans for a national defense rally in connection with the annual Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution here in April will be made when Mrs. E. Thomas Boyd, of Denver, defense chairman of the D. A. R., arrived at headquarters January 29.

Representatives of other patriotic organizations will be invited to the rally, under the sponsorship of the D. A. R. committee on national defense through patriotic education.

Mrs. Boyd is coming from Denver for the D. A. R. board meeting February 2 at Continental Hall.

War work of the D. A. R. has expanded beyond its proportions in the last war, Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the D. A. R., said in a statement from headquarters.

From numerous chapters have come calls for visits by Mrs. Pouch in order that she may survey their war activities. This week her itinerary ranged from Virginia to New York. Today she will attend a silver jubilee luncheon of the General Asa Danforth Chapter in Syracuse, N. Y.

Mrs. Pouch will return to Washington Monday for a meeting at the White House for a group of women leaders in connection with the infantile paralysis campaign.

After that meeting, Mrs. Pouch will go to Detroit and then to New England, before returning to Washington for a national defense forum of the General Federation of Women's Clubs January 26.

Mary K. Browne to Talk On Physical Fitness

Miss Mary K. Browne, who is connected with the physical fitness program of the Office of Civilian Defense, will discuss the program at the meeting of the Lake Erie College Club of Washington at 2 p. m. today at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. H. V. Porter.

Miss Browne, who will be honor guest at the meeting, is a faculty member of the college on leave for the duration of the war.

Herron Heads Military Order Of World War

Col. Leroy W. Herron was elected commander of the District Commandery of the Military Order of the World War at the organization's annual election of officers at the Army and Navy Club. Col. Herron succeeds Lieut. Col. James G. Townsend, who becomes national delegate.

Other officers elected were Capt. Allen Gartner, senior vice commander; Dr. L. B. Norris, first junior vice commander; Lieut. John W. Morton, second junior vice commander; Lieut. Col. Edward S. Bettelheim, jr., reelected secretary; Maj. Russell Freeman, reelected treasurer; Maj. W. Calhoun Sterling, judge advocate; Dr. William A. Morgan, registrar; Maj. Howard E. Kane, surgeon; Maj. George B. Chandler, historian; Lieut. Rufus Lusk, recorded, and Commander Joseph L. B. Murray, chaplain.

Col. Herron, a native of Washington, is advertising director of the Evening Star and lives at 3111 Garfield Street Northwest. He is past director of the Rotary Club and a member of the Washington Board of Trade and the Washington Advertising Club and Columbia Country Club. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American War and during the first World War he served overseas as a major with the 110th Field Artillery, Twenty-ninth Division.

Col. Herron is married and has two children, Mabel Aubrey Lane and Charlotte Virginia Zimmerman.

Treadway Asks Postponement of Social Security Expansion

Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee, yesterday demanded indefinite postponement of the President's two billion dollar Social Security expansion program "until after we have won this war."

Treadway told reporters that Congress should concentrate on a general revenue program implementing the defense effort, and not "saddle new Social Security taxes on employers and employes at this time."

The President in his budget message recommended seven billion dollars in additional general revenues plus another two billion to bring new groups under Social Security, liberalize benefits, and increase reserves from which the Treasury might borrow to aid war financing.

Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee and Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee previously had indicated they did not favor considering the two billion dollar Social Security expansion until the general tax program was out of the way.

"Employers and employes are going to have to contribute all they can as it is," said the Massachusetts Republican. "Their payroll tax will automatically go up 2 per cent each next January under present law and they must carry in addition a new load of taxes."

Treadway opposed setting a definite amount of taxes to be collected, and served notice of an intention to revive the 300 million dollar joint income tax return requirement rejected last session.

As Congress marked time on new taxes pending formulation of Treasury recommendations, word reached the Capitol that the Treasury was considering steeply graduated corporate taxes with rates graded on the basis of size of earnings. A narrow application of the principle has been in the law since the 1935 "share-the-wealth" act, but the Treasury was reported studying far higher step-ups.

Chairman George, who has predicted Congress will have to go to new forms of taxation, possibly to a withholding or a general sales tax, meanwhile suggested offsets against new taxes through purchase of Treasury bonds. George said individuals and corporations in the higher income tax brackets should be permitted to buy Government bonds up to a fixed percentage of their income, and deduct this amount from their tax payments.

Senator Taft, of Ohio, Republican member of the Finance Committee, said he would oppose any plan of compulsory bond buying in lieu of taxes, "because it will only send the debt higher."

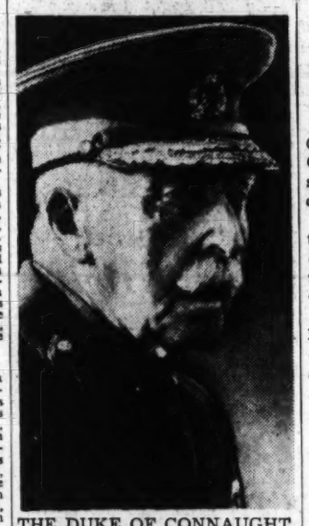
Reports that a further reduction in individual income tax exemptions may be asked by the Treasury, to $500 for single persons and $1000 for married, brought opposition to that proposal from Senator George. The Georgian said that if taxes are to be collected from persons making $500 a year, it should be done directly through a sales tax or a withholding tax.

He Walked All the Way

Munising, Mich., Jan. 16 (AP).—Martin Hollister, 21, of Kiva, a town of 100 population, was ordered by the Alger County Selective Service Board to report here today for a physical examination.

Arriving nearly frozen but at the appointed time, the 115-pound youth explained he had left home yesterday afternoon and had walked the 40 miles to Munising. Granted time to thaw out, he passed the examination with flying colors.

Duke of Connaught, 91, Last Surviving Son of Victoria, Dies



THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT,

Lived to See Four Of His Kin Reign On British Throne

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 16.—The Duke of Connaught, 91, last surviving son of Queen Victoria, died today at Bagshot Park, Surrey, after an illness of several months.

Born on May 1, 1850, and given the first name of Arthur in honor of the Duke of Wellington, who had the same natal day, the Duke of Connaught's career spanned four generations of British royalty. He lived to see his elder brother become Edward VII, his nephew rule as George V and his great-nephews reign as Edward VIII and George VI.

The army, which he ultimately served as field marshal, was a major part of his life. After his days of active service, he never was happier than when reviewing units with which he had been associated in other years.

Two days before his ninetieth birthday he inspected two Canadian regiments at Aldershot. He had been their colonel in chief for years.

The duke's last official appearance was at the christening of Prince William, first son of the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, who was born last December 18.

The title and dukedom of Connaught pass to the Earl of Macduff, a 27-year-old grandson who is an officer with a famous Scottish regiment.

The following statement was issued from Bagshot Park:

"January 16.—Field Marshal His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught passed away very peacefully this morning at Bagshot Park, Surrey. He had been in failing health for some months past."

Service Men To Get Free Foot X-Ray

Any officer or man in the military service who wants to know whether the shoes he bought or the Army gave him are suited to his feet and his job may do so without cost next week.

At the Regal Shoe Store, 1333 F Street Northwest, is a new foot X-ray machine, which turns out pictures showing exactly how the foot is treated by the shoes in which it is encased. Pictures made by this machine are positives, not the reversed negatives usual in X-ray photography.

The machine was designed by Elmer J. Bliss, inventor of the Resco foot-measuring machine used extensively by the United State Army in the first World War to insure proper fitting of shoes for soldiers. While the X-ray does not fit shoes, it shows clearly if those one is wearing are not only properly fitted but also properly shaped for best results.

Pictures already made by the machine, it was pointed out, indicate that at least 80 per cent of shoes ordinarily purchased are not adapted to the feet they are bought for. With this knowledge, illustrated beyond question by pictures of bones twisted out of place or cramped in improperly fitted shoes, the individual may adopt the size and the last best suited to himself.

Photographing feet of soldiers, it was said, should provide a library of graphic information on the types of shoes now worn by officers and men of the Army and the methods by which they are fitted.

Service men may have X-rays made between 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. without cost any day next week.

Washington Youth Gets Wings in Canadian Force

One Washingtonian was among 12 Americans graduated yesterday from two service flying schools of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The Washingtonian was J. E. Hawkins, who received his wing insignia at Camp Borden, Ontario. Other Americans graduating with him were W. G. Johnson, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; E. L. Bishop, York, Pa.; F. J. Chaplin, New York City; L. M. Walker, Battle Creek, Mich., and A. C. Baker, Lansing, Mich.

Six others were graduated from St. Hubert, near Montreal. They were:

Wayne Freeman Mann, McKinney, Tex.; four Californians, Gerald Scott Ashcroft, Long Beach; William George Nisbett, Los Angeles; Isaac Shelley Best, San Diego, and John Colman Herbst, Beverly Hills, and Thomas Harlon Evans, Seattle, Wash.

D. C.'s Employes Buy $200,000 Of Defense Bonds

More than 5500 District of Columbia employes have subscribed in excess of $200,000 for United States defense bonds and stamps, the Commissioners reported yesterday.

The District heads, some weeks ago, sent special memoranda to all department heads asking tthat employes give whatever possible toward bond and stamp purchases.

"The response," said Commissioner John Russell Young, "has been magnificent." Including police, firemen and per diem workers, the city has some 14,000 employes.

Vandalism With a Vengeance

Detroit, Jan. 16 (AP).—Tires on automobiles used by workers at Aeronautical Products, Inc., were slashed last night while the men were at work, and company officials immediately said they suspected sabotage. More than 40 tires were cut. Some of the men said they had only four tires on cars which they use for transportation to and from the factory.

Tire Lack May Bring Back Dobbin

From Detroit come reports that the rubber tire shortage is about to bring the horse-drawn milk wagon back to the streets. In Washington dairymen say frankly that they haven't bought a horse, rather are awaiting developments. One dairyman saw the element of sleep, or the disturbance of it, involved. If there's no rubber for trucks there is none for the wagon wheels.

Emergency Bridge Plan Approved

Parks Board Favors Acquiring Pontoons for Use Here If Needed

A system of pontoon bridges across the Potomac, in case anything should happen to the permanent spans, was approved yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The scheme was submitted by the District Army Engineer's Office, climaxing an intensive study which experts have made against the possible destruction of Key, Arlington, Highway, Railroad and Anacostia Bridges.

Col. W. J. Barden, District Army Engineer, and E. A. Schmidt, senior civilian engineer, explained that the pontoon-trestle spans could be erected in a few hours—Army style—provided the necessary equipment was in storage nearby.

So far the project is only in the planning stage. Whether the Engineer's Office will go forward with it, procuring and installing the trestles and making the pontoons available, was not disclosed.

It was announced that Schmidt and John Nolen, jr., planning director of the commission, have been appointed to the planning committee of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin. Objective of the five-State agency is to develop comprehensively the Potomac watershed.

Concluding its monthly meeting, the planning body:

Approved plans for development of three new recreation centers: Keene, at Riggs and Blair Roads Northeast; Anacostia, adjacent to the Aliey Dwelling Authority's Parkside dwellings project, and Stevens, near Van Buren and Thirteenth Streets Northwest.

Approved a revised scheme for the proposed stadium and sports center at the foot of East Capitol Street, recommending that at least a part of the vast tract be converted at once into an improvised play area, inasmuch as the war has postponed the stadium indefinitely. Another part of the site is to be used for a temporary office building.

Favorably passed upon a preliminary design for a parkway linking the Anacostia approach to the South Capitol Street Bridge with Suitland, Md., where a large Federal office building is under construction.

The planners, with Chairman Frederic A. Delano presiding, also indorsed a revised zoning plan for Arlington County, formal approval being unnecessary; recommended transfer of a small triangle at Georgia Avenue and Varnum Street from the office of National Capital Parks to the District Commissioners, in order to expedite traffic improvement, and ordered condemnation of certain land which is needed for completion of the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

Wage-Hr. Unit Shift to N.Y. Made Official

The Wage-Hour Division will be moved to New York City sometime in the near future, as forecast in The Post, Labor Department officials announced yesterday. No specific time has been set for the transfer which will affect approximately 500 employes here.

Pittsburgh originally had been selected as the new home for the division. However, Labor Secretary Perkins, at a special meeting of wage-hour workers last January 2, announced that these plans had been abandoned and that the choice had been narrowed down to two cities, whose identity she did not name. Pittsburgh, it was said, was given up because of a lack of suitable quarters because it was not sufficiently accessible to Washington.

It is understood that the Wage-Hour Division will be quartered in a building at 1560 Broadway. The transfer will release about two floors to other agencies in the Labor Department Building here.

At the time the announcement was made of the transfer to Pittsburgh many Wage-Hour employes applied for transfer to other Federal agencies here. Secretary Perkins indicated that officials would be reasonable in considering the requests so that no real hardship would be placed on individual employes affected by the transfer. At the same time, she warned that the Federal Government was planning to move other agencies from Washington.

Trial Board Weighs Charges Of Shooting at Prisoner

A police trial board last night had under advisement testimony in the cases of four Metropolitan policemen, charged in connection with the reported firing of a bullet at a Negro prisone, in the cell block at the First Precinct Station.

Findings of the board will be submitted to Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, this morning. It is within the power of the board to recommend that the defendants be dismissed from the force.

Private Arnold F. Jackson, who is alleged to have fired a shot at Roland Junior Lindsay, denied that he had any knowledge of a shot being fired.

Lieut Loraine Johneson, who was Jackson's commanding officer last summer when the incident is supposed to have occurred, testified that he thought a firecracker had been discharged and that subsequent investigation failed to uncover any additional facts. He is charged with neglect of duty for not reporting what occurred to Capt. Harvey Callahan, then the precinct commander.

Two other privates, Frank B. Knapp and George W. Bromley, are also charged in the case. Knapp, turnkey at the station house, is accused of neglect of duty for not being in the cell block, and Bradley of conduct unbecoming an officer.

Lindsay, now under sentence of death for raping a young woman and assaulting her companion, testified Jackson fired at him at Bromley's suggestion: that he (Lindsay) gave Knapp a piece of lead which fell in his cell and which he said was part of a bullet.

Knapp denied the man's statement, as did Bromley.

Inspector Ira E. Keck is chairman of the trial board and Capt. Oscar J. Letterman and Assistant Corporation Counsel Matt Mahorner are the other two judges.

95 Filipino Cab Drivers Contribute $400 To District Red Cross Chapter's War Fund

NO TIME WASTED—Final rehearsals were staged last night for "Volunteers for Victory," the Red Cross pageant to be staged today at the convention of Patriotic Women for National Defense in the Mayflower Hotel. Gene Mendelsohn (right), who was knitting for the Red Cross during rehearsals, measures a half-finished sweater with the assistance of Dick Sykey and Dorothy Flynn. The song, composed by Allen Carter and Brad Greene, which lent its name to the pageant, has been made a gift to the District Red Cross

Sum Represents More Than a Day's Pay for Each One

Ninety-five Filipino taxi drivers who know, in a special way, right now, what the Red Cross means, will contribute more than a day's pay each to the District war fund today.

The presentation of $400 will be made by a delegation of the drivers at 10:30 a. m. at the District Red Cross Chapter House, 1730 E Street Northwest. The delegation will be led by Florentino Villamor, 2109 Eighteenth Street Northwest, who conceived the idea of the contribution. The money will be accepted by Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the chapter.

Villamor said the drivers are organizing a first-aid class, under Red Cross instruction, and have volunteered their services to the motor corps during any emergency.

The Red Cross drive has had the incidental result of organizing the drivers, Villamor said.

"I have been trying to have them organized for a long time," he said, "but it wasn't until we wanted to do something for the Red Cross that we could bring everyone together."

Members of the District Chapter of the speakers bureau will address six Washington organizations over the weekend in connection with the current drive to raise $750,000 here for the war fund.

Eleanor Palffy, vice chairman of the nurses' aides in charge of training, will speak at 8 o'clock tonight before the Federation of Citizens Associations in the District Building and at 7 p. m. tomorrow to the young people's groups of the Wesley Methodist Church.

Bruce Baird, chairman of the American Red Cross War Relief Fund, will address the Political Study Club at 2:30 p. m. today. Mrs. Leslie Clark Stevens, chairman of the District Red Cross radio bureau, will speak at the Jewish Community Center at 10 a. m. She will be accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Hummer, representing the Junior Red Cross.

Monday, Mrs. Howard McElDowney will speak at the Jewish Center at 2 p. m. and Mrs. John E. Dingwell at the Hebrew Home for Aged Ladies at 3 p. m.

Boy Calls Police to Chase Spooks

A spooky movie made such a strong impression on a 7-year-old schoolboy last night that he locked himself in his house and then called police asking their protection.

The boy, who identified himself to police as Billy Dailey, 531 Fifth Street Southeast, had attended a movie yesterday afternoon with his mother after coming home from Dent School. His mother later went to work and Billy was left alone in the house.

But Billy couldn't forget the movie he had seen. It was an eerie picture, he said, and he became frightened. He locked the doors of the house and then put in a call for police. They offered to take him to the Fifth Precinct Station.

His mother then was communicated with and she told police she would send a relative over to keep Billy company and keep the spooks away.

Three Face Action in Crash Death, Murder

While one of their number appears before a coroner's jury this morning, two other members of a suspected holdup gang will be arraigned at Police Court charged with being fugitives from Baltimore, where a delicatessen operator was shot to death December 28.

Charles Benjamine, Negro, 22, of 16 Patterson Street Northeast, will be the defendant at the coroner's hearing into the death of Walter L. Ivery, 25, of 122 Bates Street Northwest, who was killed January 10, while attempting to elude police.

Ivery was a passenger in an automobile operated by Benjamine and was injured fatally when the car crashed into a tree at Columbia Road and Park Place Northwest. Police said the car was driven from Baltimore after a holdup and was picked up at the District line by local police on a broadcast from the Maryland city.

The two men charged with being fugitives are Edward Woffard, 26, of the 1300 block Corcoran Street Northwest, and Robert White, 24, 228 P Street Northwest.

It is alleged in the fugitive warrant that the pair shot and killed Voncent di Pietro during a holdup in Baltimore.

Benjamine also is charged in connection with the fatal shooting but will not be arraigned at Police Court until Monday, after the inquest. Regardless of the finding of the coroner's jury, it was said, he will be arraigned as a fugitive and returned to Baltimore to stand trial for murder.

Four other men, said by detectives to be members of the gang, are being held here and will be charged in at least 15 local holdups, it was stated.

Arlington Libraries Aid in Book Drive

Mrs. Mildred G. Blattner, Arlington County librarian, announced the five local libraries are participating in the country-wide Victory Drive for books to be sent to camps for entertainment of the soldiers. All books will be sent to places designated by the Virginia State Library Association.

Engineer Gets Jail Term for Forging Bond

George E. Stone, 38-year-old construction engineer, was given a jail sentence of one to three years by Justice James W. Morris in District Court yesterday on charges that he had forged a $328,000 contract performance bond for the construction of a Federal Housing Authority project in Anacostia.

Stone was accused of having given a false bond in order to keep his contract to build the project, and with having forged correspondence, letterheads and premium bills in order to make the bond appear genuine.

In asking for clemency, Stone pointed out that in making arrangements to fulfill the contract, he had showed the FHA how the job could be done at a saving of $100,000 under theoriginal estimate. He also asserted that he had not defrauded the Government out of any money, but had merely given the forged bond as surety because he was unable to raise a real one on short notice.

The justice declared this did not change the serious nature of the offense, but said that he had taken these factors into consideration in imposing less than half of the maximum sentence.

Two Clubs Plan Hikes Tomorrow

Members of two hiking clubs will give their leg muscles a wintertime workout tomorrow.

The Potomac Appalachian Trail Club will examine "a little explored group of mountains" lying east of the Blue Ridge Mountains, between Old Rag Mountain and Marys Rock. The Capital Hiking Club will take its pedestrian canter through a "primeval and picturesque territory," a 6-mile stretch along Accotink Creek, Va., through areas laden with beech, laurel and evergreens.

Persons interested in the Potmac Appalachian club hike should telephone National 1880 and those in the Capital Hiking Club walk Michigan 6363, Branch 607.

PUC Denies Plea for 161 1-Man Cars

Indicates Company Has Not Competed Enough in Effort To Employ Men

A long-pending application by the Capital Transit Co. for permission to convert 161 of its present two-man streetcars to one-man operation was rejected last night by the Public Utilities Commission.

The P. U. C. based its denial of the petition on two points:

One-man operated trolleys would slow down traffic.

Transit company officials failed to show that their alleged inability to employ additional men was due to lack of labor and not because the company had not sufficiently competed for labor.

The petition was filed with the commission on September 10, 1941. Hearing were held on October 7 and 10.

Opposition testimony was offered by representatives of Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America.

In denying the application "without prejudice," the P. U. C. indicated it would entertain a later petition showing that each of the cars sought to be remodeled will adequately serve the transportation needs of the public and that the company has reasonably exhausted the labor market.

It also was announced by the P. U. C. that hearings will be held January 30 at 2 p. m. in Room 203 of the District Building, on requests of the Federation of Citizens Association for the sale of three streetcar tokens for 25 cents.

The tokens are now issued at six for 50 cents and three are not permitted to be sold.

Chairman Gregory Hankin of the P. U. C., together with highway and traffic officials, yesterday viewed motion pictures of streetcar loading platforms near the Social Security Board. Some 1500 Federal workers in the vicinity have asked that the platforms be moved directly in front of the SSB Building.

The car stops are now located near Third and Sixth Streets on Independence Avenue Southwest. If they are moved as requested, it was pointed out, they will be brought too near the triple intersection of Fourth Street, Independence and Maryland Avenues.

In the opinion of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer the move would prove dangerous to both pedestrians and moving vehicular traffic.

No decision was reached.

Guns Turned On Bandits by Grocer, Son

Two holdup men had the guns turned on them in a grocery store last night, and ended up telling the story themselves to police.

Ben Solomon, 45, the store proprietor, said the men entered his place at 1012 First Street Northeast shortly before midnight. The tall one carried a gun, and announced the holdup. The short one cleaned out the cash register—scooping up some $25.

Then an unsuspecting customer walked in, and the gunman turned to see who he was. That gave Solomon the chance he wanted—a second in which to pull his own gun from behind the counter.

"All right, I'm holding you up now," announced the grocer.

At that instant the man with the money ran out the door, and the grocer's son Hal, 20, who'd been there all the while, snatched the gunman's revolver, and ran out after the fleeing bandit.

The customer called police.

Private John Boyd was there in a few minutes on his motorcycle. He was followed by Capt. Robert Barrett, assistant chief of detectives. They took the gunman, captured by Solomon, into custody, then obtained from him his confederate's address. The man who had fled was apprehended within five minutes.

Police said the pair admitted a holdup last Wednesday night at 1205 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, where Louis Dorfman was robbed of $16.

Mrs. M. C. S. White Dies at 84 in Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Martha Celeste Schaefer White, 84 years old, who had been active in Seventh Day Adventist Church work nearly all her life, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lewis K. Christian, 12 Sherman Avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Funeral services will be at 2:30 p. m. today at the Takoma Seventh Day Adventist Church. Burial will be in Washington Memorial Cemetery.

Born in Archibald, Ohio, Mrs. White became a charter member of the Toledo Seventh Day Adventist Church in 1885 and she was the last surviving charter member.

She served as matron at Mount Vernon Academy, Mount Vernon, Ohio, and Emanuel Missionary College, Berrien Springs, Mich., both Seventh Day Adventist institutions.

She was also a matron at the Battle Creek Sanitarium Annex for several years and a mother in the Haskell Orphans' Home in Battle Creek.

Mrs. White came to Washington from California three years ago with her daughter. Besides her daughter, she is survived by two sons, Harry B. and W. Sidney White, both living in the West; two sisters, Mrs. W. B. Schneider and Miss Augusta Schaefer, both of Toledo, and four grandchildren.

Rescue Mission Mortgage Drive Gets Under Way

Workers from 20 churches engaged in the drive to lift the mortage on the Northeast Rescue Mission feel that "6" is their lucky number.

Meeting last night at 6 p. m. at Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A Streets Northeast, 60 drive "captains" and 150 of their coworkers pledged to raise $6000 in 60 days.

Incidentally, the Northeast Rescue Mission at 1340 H Street Northeast, which is supported by people of the 20 churches in all sections of the city, is now in its sixth year of activity, serving both transients and community residents.

2 Firemen Hurt

Two Burned, 15 Rescued In Fires Here

Two persons were burned, two firemen were hurt and about 40 occupants either were rescued by firemen or driven into the street in two fires yesterday.

In a three-alarm blaze that broke out in an apartment house at 1700 U Street Northwest, firemen rescued 15 persons, including a 14-month-old baby and an 8-year-old girl.

Two firemen and a motorist were injured when a hose truck on its way to the fire collided with an automobile at Florida and Rhode Island Avenues Northwest. Capt. Raymond A. Galpin, 68, and Private Edward W. Auld, of No. 12 Engine Company, suffered minor cuts while Clarence W. Roberts, 49, of 1301 Fifteenth Street Northwest, suffered head and leg injuries. They were treated at Emergency Hospital.

Another Apartment Fire

Estimate of damage and origin of the fire were not immediately determined.

In another apartment house fire at 1422 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, two persons were burned, two firemen hurt and more than a score of occupants driven to the street in their nightclothes. Carried to the street by firemen, Henry A. Mausley, 54, suffered burns to his face, back and hands, and Harry Kasimpardis, 40, burns to his face. They were removed to Emergency Hospital, where the condition of Mausley was said to be serious.

Two Firemen Hurt

Injured in fighting the blaze in the four-story, stone-front building were Sergt. C. E. McGhee, No. 1 Engine Company, and Fireman William K. Benthal, No. 3 Truck Company, whose right hand was cut.

Another fire, which was discovered shortly after 2 p. m. yesterday in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Singer at 2934 Fourteenth Street Northwest, caused damage to building and contents estimated at $1500 and tied up streetcar and automobile traffic on Fourteenth Street for almost an hour.

Firemen believe the blaze started in a hallway outside the apartment and ate through a wooden door into the apartment, spreading rapidly when it reached the furnishings. No one was in the apartment when the fire broke out.

Wisconsin Society To Dance Tonight

Members of the Wisconsin State Society and their friends will dance in the Burgandy Room of the Wardman Park Hotel tonight from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. Members are invited to a reception for the State delegation in Congress from 9:30 to 10 p. m.

Room Rental Office Opens Tomorrow

Washington householders with rooms to offer war workers will have their chance to volunteer them tomorrow.

The new headquarters of the District Defense Housing Registry in Post Square will open at 9 a. m. with 14 trunk telephone lines installed to accommodate persons with rooms to rent.

The telephone number is Republic 1086. The hours on weekdays will be 8:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m., and on Sundays, 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.

The one-story frame building—completed in less than two weeks—will be staffed by some 30 workers under the direction of the District Defense Council and Washington Board of Trade.

The Commissioners last week issued a formal proclamation urging every Washington home-owner to provide "decent living accommodations" for at least one war worker.

Construction of the new registry quarters was under the supervision of Charles F. Palmer, coordinator of housing. The building contains 2000 square feet with a 32-foot counter in a large center room and two wings for filing and other operations.

The registry has been in existence since March 17, 1941, and was originally set up in cramped quarters on Indiana Avenue Northwest. Salaries of staff members and expenses are being paid by the Board of Trade.

Roy Miller will be manager of the new headquarters and all activities will be under the general direction of Lawrence E. Williams, chairman of the defense housing council. Other members of the council are William Press, secretary; Harry L. Anderson, Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, J. B. Gordon, John Ihlder, Charles C. Koones, C. F. Preller, Charles M. Thomas and James C. Wilkes.

Funeral Today For Mrs. Shaffer, Florist's Wife

Funeral services for Mrs. Margaret Irene Shaffer, who died last Wednesday at Calvert County Hospital, Prince Frederick, Md., will be held from the Nalley funeral home, Mount Rainier, Md., at 2 p. m. today.

Mrs. Shaffer, who was 46, was the wife of Arthur J. Shaffer, well-known Washington florist, 615 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. She had been ill for about six months.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Shaffer is survived by her mother, Mrs. Mary E. Bell, and three children by a previous marriage, George E. Huber, Mrs. Virgie Black and Private David Huber, U. S. A., stationed at Dallas, Tex.

National Museum Acquires 326,686 Specimens in Year

The National Museum during the past year added 326,686 specimens to its collections to bring the total number close to 17,500,000, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, the secretary, reported to the board of regents in annual meeting yesterday.

Headed by Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone, the regents viewed a selected group of acquisitions, chief among which were an 1800-carat aquamarine crystal from Brazil, the fifth largest meteorite ever found in the United States, and a collection of old and new Stone Age and Bronze Age implements and ornaments from Java.

Studies on fundamental materials for national defense are in progress, Dr. Abbot reported. The Smithsonian's vast collections are of great usefulness in the study of such strategic materials as rubber, tin, aluminum, mica, optical glass and abrasives, it was stated.

"Significant advances" were made during the year, Dr. Abbot said, in the complex problem of periodic variations in solar radiation and their effects on terrestrial weather. These variations are extremely minute, as measured on earth, and hence, he said, it is difficult to eliminate observational errors, but their weather effects are now apparent and give hope of perfecting methods of weather forecasting for several years in advance, the regents were informed.

Studying the daily measurements, Dr. Abbot noted that the solar variation is several times greater in percentage for the blue-violet band of the spectrum than for the solar spectrum as a whole. He has worked out "a promising method," he said, for obtaining observations restricted to this band and there is "great hope" that the new method will yield more reliable daily indications. It has been introduced at three field observing stations, it was announced.

The regents attending, besides the chief justice, were Vice President Henry A. Wallace, Clarence Cannon, William P. Cole, jr., Foster Stearns, Frederic A. Delano, Roland S. Morris, Harvey N. Davis, Vannevar Bush and Frederic C. Walcott.

'Sergeant York' Returns With Intensified Appeal

Presented for First Time at Popular Prices, Heroic Biographical Film Arouses New Fervor At Both the Earle and Ambassador Theaters

"SERGEANT YORK." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Abem Finkel and Harry Chandlee, Howard Koch and John Huston, based on the diary of Sergeant Alvin C. York, starring Gary Cooper, with Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie, George Tobias, Stanley Ridges, Margaret Wycherly, Ward Bond, Noah Beery, jr., June Lockhart, Dickie Moore, Clem Bevans, Howard de Silva, Charles Trowbridge, Harvey Stephens, David Bruce, Charles Esmond, Joseph Sawyer, Pat Flaherty, Robert Porterfield, Erville Alderson and hundreds more. Directed by Howard Hawks. At the Earle Theater.

HAILED BY BOTH PUBLIC AND CRITICS throughout the country as one of the great pictures of 1941, the Jesse L. Lasky-Warner Brothers production of "Sergeant York" yesterday contemporaneously launched its first Washington presentations at popular prices at both the Earle and Ambassador theaters. Overflow crowds enthusiastically greeted its reappearance at both houses.

It would be placing a severe strain on truth to say that audience reaction to "Sergeant York" now is as complacent as it was last August, at the time of its local "road show" engagement. War seemed comparatively remote then. Now we are in the thick of it, with still thicker periods of combat inevitably to come. That makes an enormous difference. Public appreciation and approval of "Sergeant York's" inspiring object lesson in the exercise of the true spirit of Americanism has been quickened and intensified a thousandfold since last summer.

The fact nevertheless remains that this faithful transcription of the factual story of the life of Sergeant Alvin Cullom York from the pages of his diary to the screen is not a "war picture." The exploits in the Argonne, which brought Sergeant York out of the First World War as one of the greatest individual heroes in the whole history of armed conflict, serve only as the capstone of an intimate and compelling study in character. Considerably more than half of the more than two-hour length of the film is devoted to an examination of Alvin York as a person rather than as a soldier. In this dominant portion of the picture lie its greatest power and the largest measure of its homely and simple charm.

As must be universally known by now, the action discovers Alvin York as a hell-raisin' young buck of the Tennessee mountains, who would rather drink his corn than eat it, finds more fun in breaking up a church meeting than attending one and is pretty generally looked upon as the community's foremost good-for-nothing. By everyone, that is, but his Spartan mother and Pastor Rosier Pile, who also presides over the clearinghouse for gossip known as the village store. Between them they see to it that Alvin "gets religion." There is nothing halfway about his conversion. It marks the beginning of a metamorphosis from which evolves a great force for rectitude and right living. This gradual growth encompasses the bashful wooing of "Miss Gracie" Williams, the bitter struggle for a piece of bottom land on which she may be suitably supported, the conviction of the "conscientious objector" to war, and the eventual fortitude that made possible the capture of 132 German prisoners single-handed. The character of Sergeant York and the vital incidents in his life are thickly studded with the sturdy stuff of which America is made. They all have been captured with amazing fidelity in the picture.

A Huge Cast Is Skilfully Utilized

So splendid is Gary Cooper's performance in the title role of "Sergeant York" that it is the well-founded national expectation that it will win him the coveted Academy Award for the best male acting of 1941 on the screen. Fully as he realizes the spirit and the purpose of the picture, his portrayal by no means dims the excellence of a vast number of others cast in vital roles. Walter Brennan, as Pastor Pile; Joan Leslie, as "Miss Gracie"; Margaret Wycherly, the heroic mother; Dickie Moore, the younger brother; Stanley Ridges, the understanding and admirable Maj. Buxton; June Lockhart, Ward Bond, Howard de Silva, Robert Porterfield, Pat Flaherty, George Tobias and an uncounted list of others hold the average of merit extraordinarily high. Howard Hawks direction and Max Steiner's music are other tremendously valuable factors in the rounded excellence of a monumental work.

The length of the screen feature necessarily has telescoped Harry Anger's stage revue at the Earle this week in everything but sound worth. With Joan Ritter cleverly announcing the stage activities, the Roxyettes open and close the bill in two of their most effective routines, making room in the interim for the close harmonies of an incidental male quartet, the graceful pirouetting of Carol King, one of the more gifted of the ballerinas, and the self-deprecating mimicry of Larry Blake, a literate and polished young man who gives impersonation a new twist. Jo Lombardi's patriotic overture, with its variations on Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," and the newsreel further augment the capital M-U-S-T feature.

Metropolitan

No one with an interest in air warfare should miss "Target for Tonight." This is the R. A. F. documentary film continuing for a second week at the Metropolitan on a double bill with a mystery yarn starring George Sanders, "A Date With the Falcon."

"Target for Tonight" is certainly the most remarkable film record of 1941. It tells a story words can never tell—the story of the pioneers who are vanguard of a host that someday will mete out a terrible vengeance on the horde that has disrupted the peace of the world. There are no professional actors, no fictionized account of great derring-do, no dare-devilish studio doubles in "Target for Tonight." The players are all men and officers of the R. A. F. simply being themselves at work. Their work is to pick a "Target for Tonight," search it out from the air hundreds of miles from home base, blast the blazes out of it and return to fight another night.

Plans and preparations leading up to a night's bombing attack, the foray itself and the never-certain return are pictured with an impact that is stunning. There are no stiff-necked heroics; all talk is natural and amiably spoken by men from Caithness to Bow Bells. The film runs about an hour and when you've seen it you'll feel more heartened and prouder than you have for many a day.

"A Date With the Falcon" is good good enough filler material for this outstanding R. A. F. report. It's a story of diamonds and thievery with a timely twist. Premise is that silly that the police department is always dumber than an amorous barfly, but it's frankly make-believe, so let it pass. George Sanders, Wendy Barrie, James Gleason, Allen Jenkins and Mona Maris are featured. R. L. C.

Columbia

Young advertising executives should never permit those million-dollar contracts to interfere with the proper observance of their fifth wedding anniversaries. If they do, the duality of their domestic bliss is pretty apt to turn triangular, with potentially disastrous results.

That is the way it happens in Paramount's picturization of Samson Raphaelson's brisk and breezy comedy of "Skylark," which once served the gay purposes of Gertrude Lawrence on the stage and now returns to the screen at the Columbia Theater, with Claudette Colbert in the Lawrence role and Ray Milland and Brian Aherne needling each other as the rival husband-that-is and husband-that-hopes-to-be.

Smart, sophisticated and well above the juvenile level in both content and treatment, "Skylark," in its new manifestation, is one of the glossiest of the marital comedies opulently produced and given full value as to line and situation by a particularly well-chosen cast.

Miss Colbert, of course, is at her scintillant sleekest in this sort of fashionable frolic. Ray Milland, as her harassed husband, is as congenially cast as he was, say, opposite the same star in "Arise, My Love," and Brian Aherne finds himself happily assigned to the part of the interloper, who almost gets away with it. The piece is fairly riddled with saucy situations and incisive incidents—like the one aboard the sailing sloop, in which Miss Colbert attempts to prepare a dish of coffee in a strong blow, for example.

Indispensable supporting roles are played in their best manner by Binnie Barnes, Grant Mitchell, Mona Barrie and that other veteran of "Arise, My Love," Walter Abel.

The genial bill at the Columbia is completed by the usual list of short subjects and the picturized news events.

Robinson Working For a Net Nothing

Edward G. Robinson is celebrating his twenty-fifth year on stage and screen in Warner Bros.' "Larceny, Inc," by working for the same salary he received in his first show—exactly nothing a week.

When Eddie appeared for the first time on any stage in Binghamton, N. Y., he was glad to get a bit part just for the experience.

Experience is all he is getting in "Larceny, Inc," because his full salary is going as a contribution to the U. S. O.

There's a coincidence in the title of that first play he worked in 25 years ago. It was called "Paid in Full."

Romance in the Hill Country

HEDDA HOPPER

An Acre for an Actor

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 16. Humphrey Bogart tells me if all goes well he may be turning farmer on Louis Bromfield's estate in Ohio. Seems Louis, who's mighty fond of those big Hollywood checks, isn't so much in love with Hollywood as he is some of its citizens, so he's offered his acting pals an acre each if they'll build a house on it.

KAY FRANCIS

So far, Bogey, Kay Francis and Bill Gargan have been given their choice of a hunk of soil, and I hear they're already making plans. But with Louis in the big house on the hill and his constellation of stars sprinkled over his acreage, wouldn't that be a fancy feudal farm? Humphrey says the only thing that worries him is that he hears farmers are supposed to get up at 4:30 a. m., which is worse than a studio call.

Seems to me Jimmy Cagney offered some of his pals a bit of his land back in Cape Cod, but the only ones who went back there occasionally to live already owned places. They include Bob Montgomery and Bette Davis. Bette, who's nervous as a Mexican jumping bean these days, hopes to land back there while the sap's running. (To a New Englander that means a maple tree) While she's east, she'll donate a couple of shows to the Red Cross.

With all this fancy talk about Jimmy Cagney's plans after he finishes "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and his contract at Warners, Jimmy says he's made no plans; and as far as making "morale" pictures, it's been his idea (maybe an erroneous one) that any picture which gives you a laugh, heart-throb, or thrill, builds morale—"and that's the kind I've been trying to make all my life."

There's much chit-chat as to whether "For Whom the Bell Tolls," after the fabulous price paid for it, will ever be produced. The world conflict going on today making the Spanish Revolution look like a pimple on Pike's Peak.

Paul Whiteman, jr., has been working as a mail clerk for two weeks at Columbia Studio, but he's a chip off the old block just the same. He's organized some of the front office boys into a band and even has Janet Blair's promise to sing with them when they make their first public appearance. . . .

The dresses Eddie Stevenson is designing for Dolores Del Rio are so revealing the sketches have to be submitted to the Hays office before they can be made up for "Journey Into Fear."

Lou Costello, getting a whale of a salary at Metro, spent his one afternoon off watching Lon Chaney, jr., play a monster in "Ghost of Frankenstein." He immediately nick-named him "Frankie."

Sir Cedric Hardwicke claims the only real escapist pictures are the bad ones. "Because," says he, "after seeing a good one, the workaday world depresses you. But when you spend a couple hours looking at a bad one, you're so hepped up getting out of the theater, joy lasts a whole evening."

Those night club dates Miriam Hopkins has been having with Gene Solow are business conferences. (Well, that's what she says!) Seems Gene wants to produce a new play by Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell for Miriam.

Chester Morris, believe it or not, is celebrating his twenty-fifth year on screen and stage. Got his first job when he played hockey from school in Mount Vernon, New York, to work in a picture being shot there by the old Tannhauser Co., Chester's first picture here was "Alibi," 12 years ago.

Leo Carillo is getting a movement started to have all Japs living on strategic knolls on Coast move back. Said he, "They've done it in Mexico, and why shouldn't we do it here?" . . . Leo has blacked out his famous illuminated saddle for the duration.

Whatever happened to Douglas (Wrong Way) Corrigan? He could fly in any direction now and still get into a battle line.

If those boys who tried to break into John Shelton's car and damaged a window had gone to the other side, it would have been easier. That door was unlocked.

Porter Hall, always impervious to playing hunches, was approached about going into a tungsten mine deal about a year ago, and for no reason he fell for it—and it's bringing in "Happy Returns."

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, Jan. 16.

MESSAGE: Churchill and the other heads of all nations allied in the war against the Axis, sometime or other have sent personal messages to the people of America. The lone exception is Joseph Stalin . . . In Moscow, some months ago, Ralph Ingersoll asked Stalin: "Is there any message or statement you might want to give to the American people?" . . . Stalin hesitated, in meditation, then shook his head. "No," he finally said, "because I don't know whether the American people would like to hear from me."

GROUCHO MARX

ENTERPRISE: Mr. Justice Brynes of the United States Supreme Court now is devoting a great deal of his time to the war program at the request of the President. As a result his secretaries at the Court haven't had as much work to do as the secretaries of the other Justices . . . The latter group therefore are taunting the idle secretaries: "They're fiddling while Brynes roams."

DANCE: Groucho Marx and his friend, dance instructor Arthur Murray, went to a Hollywood party where one of the guests remembered having met Murray on board the Normandie . . . "I watched you dance all during the voyage," said the guest, "and frankly, Mr. Murray, on board that ship I danced as well as you did" . . . "Yes," Groucho reminded, "but you had the tide with you."

AMBITION: At yesterday's rehearsals of "Cafe Crown" Leo Brody delivered the line: "Cecilia, come in" . . . "That's wrong," the stage manager corrected. "It should be 'Celia, come in'" . . . "I know," sighed Miss Brody, "but I'm just trying to build up my part."

"CHATTER: The full Wake Island casualty list will be released this week . . . On February 15 the New York Times' Rotogravure section will be merged with the New York Times magazine . . . M-G-M will campaign for "Joe Smith, American," as one of the few patriotic pictures which also is entertaining . . . Diplomatic reports reveal that Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" was shown a few weeks ago at the F. I. F. studios on the Champs Elysees. The Nazi officials managed to obtain a Swedish print of that film . . . Last summer Elizabeth Hawes and Joe Losey sent their infant son to a New England camp. Losey made a documentary film about the activities there. That film now has been bought by the British Minister of Information and the Rockefeller Committee, which will distribute it a a documentary on the evacuation of children.

DRAMA: Clifford Odets, whose "Clash By Night" now is a hit, sat with William Saroyan, discussing the American Theater. Odets mentioned his first play, "Awake and Swing." Saroyan confessed that he never had read it . . . "What?" gasped Odets. "That play of mine is one of the truly great plays of the Twentieth Century" . . . Saroyan blinked and answered: "Who just said that great-play line—you or me?"

MEETING: Artie Shaw joined a restaurant table where he was introduced, among others, to Dr. Leo Rosten. When Dr. Rosten left Shaw discovered that he had met the author of H*Y*M*A*N K*A*P*L*A*N and "Hollywood, the Movie Makers" . . . "Why didn't someone tell me that he's the man who wrote those books?" Shaw demanded . . . "In introducing somebody you just can't say that he's the one who wrote, etc.," said Johnny Green, "—except Benny Davis, who wrote 'Margie.'"

PRICE: Eddy Duchin escorted a young lady to LaGuardia Field, where she was to board a plane for Florida. While they waited, she stopped at the Cartier's counter and said: "Look, Eddy—a diamond ring under $150" . . . "From Cartier's?" said Duchin. "Is that with or without the microscope?"

MUSIC: Harry Cohn, head of Columbia Films, sat next to Harpo Marx in the Hollywood Bowl, where Vladimir Horowitz was giving a piano recital . . . They sat in fascination, listening to the magic of Horowitz's performance. And when the pianist struck the last note Cohn gripped Harpo's arm and said: "Well, Marx—what do you think of your friend, Levant, now?"

RKO-Keith's

We could have told you a couple of weeks ago, but Keith's wouldn't let us 'cause they weren't as sure as we were: "Ball of Fire" is getting a third week on the Fifteenth street screen.

"Ball of Fire" is gilt-edged producer Samuel Goldwyn in a merry mood. Having gotten "The Little Foxes" out of his system, the expansive film-maker has let loose a comedy on slang and the funny things that happen when different segments of society mix it up and discover they don't understand what the other fellow is talking about. It has some of the qualities of a Frank Capra film, but Howard Hawks was the director of this one.

Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck are the leads, the former a dr., semantics expert, the latter a sizzling night club songstress whose friendly mouthings are thoroughly refreshing. A real-life representation of Snow White's Seven Dwarfs lend considerable humor, with Richard Haydn outstanding as a courtly botanist. Gene Krupa makes its night spot sequence so real it gives you a hangover.

No Complaint On Carroll Kiss

The script read: "Without a word she surrenders. Her arms go about him and their lips meet in a prolonged kiss. They kiss hungrily and possessively."

Costars Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden were spending an entire afternoon rehearsing the love scene for "Bahama Passage." Producer-director Edward H. Griffith wanted the embrace to photograph letter perfect, and had the pair go through the same motions over and over again for the sake of precise timing.

"Do you think I have too much lipstick on?" Miss Carroll asked Hayden.

"Not according to my taste," he blushed.

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

That man in the White House did, indeed, earn the label of the Nation's First Fan yesterday. When President Roosevelt, to lose, gave the green light to organized baseball as an acceptable war-time function, the game was receiving the most extraordinary compliment of its 102-year history.

The President in declaring he saw a war-time need for the recreation provided by baseball, set at rest the fears of clubowners for their game but the clubowners and players can still butch the situation for themselves if they lose sight of Mr. Roosevelt's one injunction. It behooves them to take seriously the duty the President pointed out when he declared "individual ball players subject to service in the armed forces should carry out such obligations without question."

That means no attempts at wire-pulling, no subterfuge by star players to duck military duty with or without the support of their clubs, and no absurd claims for exemption. Such tactics would profane the very special distinction of White House blessings now bestowed on baseball, and would cause official disapproval of the game quicker than any other development. Mr. Roosevelt has put baseball on its honor, in a sense.

Thus far, however, organized baseball has merited all of Mr. Roosevelt's confidence that players will not duck their military duty. Already, it appears more figures from the major and minor leagues have been drafted or enlisted than throughout World War I, when organized baseball's record was none too shining, with the shipyards a haven for scores of players.

Fans Certain to Applaud Action

To the credit of men like Clark Griffith, Tom Yawkey and Walter O. Briggs, who saw such valuable chattels as Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis, Ted Williams and Hank Greenberg inducted into the service, theirs was a completely patriotic reaction. "The Washington Club expects every man, star or rookie, to do his duty," said Mr. Griffith at the first hint that any of his players would be drafted, and that attitude was echoed by other club owners.

That Mr. Roosevelt's action in encouraging continuation of organized baseball during the war crisis will be generally applauded seems certain. As he pointed out" baseball has a definite recreational asset in time of stress and 300 teams, using between 5000 and 6000 players provide recreation for themselves just how important baseball can be in the war-time scheme, and that importance will be measured by attendance at games.

Mr. Roosevelt, incidentally, may go down as the best friend organized baseball ever had in the White House. At a time when the industry was wrapped in uncertainty to the point that Commissioner Landis felt it important to ask the White House to determine the game's wartime status with spring training only a few weeks away, doubt and nebulae were swept away by Mr. Roosevelt in one positive stroke.

Tremendous Boon to Owners

It was an added windfall to baseball when Mr. Roosevelt also gratuitously suggested more emphasis on night games, to permit attendance by defense workers who otherwise might not be able to partake of the sport. If the club owners had outlined to him their fondest prayers, and begged his indulgence, they could have received no greater boon. It means the expensive lighting plants, valued now at nearly $2,000,000, would not be costly white elephants; it means increased gate receipts at a time when defense work threatened attendance at day games, and it means, of course that the Nation's fans will have greater opportunity to see ball games.

President Roosevelt may have, in effect, overruled Commissioner Landis in the latter's own domain, on the subject of night baseball, because only a few weeks ago Landis vetoed a proposal by Clark Griffith that the number of night games be increased from 7 to 14. Now, with an approving nod from the White House, Griffith will reintroduce his request, and Landis will scarcely refuse to take the hint from the White House.

The President's action may mean financial salvation to such as the St. Louis Browns, who lost $100,000 last year partly because of the loss in revenue occasioned by the seven-game limit on night games. The Washington Club, for example, played to an average of fewer than 4000 fans in afternoon games at Griffith Stadium last season, but averaged 20,000 for night games.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 16.—Hmmm. Get a load of this: The Thoroughbred Record, which is the Bible of racehorse breeders, says in its current issue that Larry MacPhail, the raucous genius who built the Brooklyn Dodgers into the most talked-about team in Baseball, has added a racing stable to his interests.

CONSIDINE

(That loud snarl and sound of breaking glass you just heard came from the Chicago offices of Judge Landis, the height of whose love of baseball is equalled only by the depth of his hatred for all things associated with the improvement of the breed.)

The Thoroughbred Record, which either hasn't heard or just doesn't care a dang about Landis and his phobia against racing, declares: "MacPhail present. From Miami comes word that Alfred G. Vanderbilt has given two brood mares to his good friend, Larry MacPhail, of the Brooklyn Dodgers. MacPhail was given the thoroughbreds as a Christmas gift. One of the mares is in foal to Discovery and the other to Identify."

That's just peachy. We hope that the foals-to-be, tentatively named Dixie and Dolph, after Larry's two favorite ball players, will bear with valor the MacPhail colors—black and blue. Discovery was one of the best horses of our time; Identify was first class too.

The question now is whether Landis is going to let MacPhail get away with it. There is only one more terrible-tempered man in baseball than MacPhail, and he's the Judge.

McPhail Once Rebuked Landis

Their closest approach to friendship for a number of years has been an armed truce. A couple of years ago the dauntless MacPhail arose at a joint meeting and demanded practically in the Judge's teeth that the profane and arrogant old jurist stick to the letter of his contract with the owners and stop his autocratic interpretations. Not in 20 years has any one dared utter such treason within ear-shot of the man whose power over his ostensible employers is such that he could arbitrarily declare a corporation as big as the Yankees (or Dodgers) null and void. Nothing, of course, came of MacPhail's Landis-restraining proposal.

This, then, is the aggressive autocrat whose tenderesrt corn—horse racing—has now been stomped on by the loud progressive who never shared the other owners' frightened respect for the judge. The next step in this newest Landis-MacPhail battle would seem to be up to the judge. And when and if the Judge starts clouting, you may be sure that MacPhail once again will have an opportunity to bring up his original beef—that Landis has taken unto himself a little too much authority.

There is nothing in the laws and by-laws of baseball which specifically prohibit the participation of a baseball man of player in horse racing. Yet Landis forced Charley Adams out of the ownership of the Boston Bees because Adams also controlled Suffolk Downs. And Landis refused to let Bing Crosby provide the fresh capital which the Bees needed so ardently because Bing, while admittedly a fine sportsman with honorable baseball intentions, owns horses and controls Del Mark Track.

Racing Is Gambling in Landis' Eyes

In all consistency, the old judge must therefore fly at MacPhail's tonsils. He has already expressed his disapproval of MacPhail's frequent appearances at tracks. To MacPhail's credit, let it be said that he never attended a track in anything but blatant style. His colleagues and a host of ball players sneak off to tracks furtively, fearful of being seen. Not MacPhail. It's a physical impossibility too furtive in MacPhail's wardrobe.

There is nothing in the baseball rules barring Rogers Hornsby as a big league manager, yet Hornsby knows that he will never get another opportunity to pilot a big league club as long as the judge is in the saddle. For Hornsby got mixed up in a lawsuit lodged by a bookmaker, and the judge will never forgive him, even though the rajah now stands in the vestibule of the hall of fame at Cooperstown.

It isn't the horse, as an institution, which arouses Landis' choler. It is what the horse stands for—gambling—which sends the old boy off on tantrums spiced and speckled by the most picturesque profanity this side of a mule-skinner's shed. Landis became the boss of baseball because the game was honeycombed with baseball gamblers. The Chicago Black Sox were only a part of the picture. During his generation of doughty administration the judge has exterminated baseball gambling by waging merciless war on it. His iron belief is that gambling on race horses is the next worse vice to gambling on ball games, and that it, too, must go—so far as baseball men are concerned.

MacPhail doesn't think so. We can look forward to an epic argument between these two militant individuals when the crusading judge orders MacPhail to drown his equine litter.

Robinson Scores TKO Over Zivic in Tenth

Referee Donovan Stops Fight After Ex-Champion Goes Down Twice

By Bob Considine

New York, Jan. 16.—Slashed in the first round and hornswoggled frequently thereafter, electrifying Ray Robinson, the next welterweight champion of the world, fought back with jungle fury tonight to knock out Fritzie Zivic, former champion, in 31 seconds of the tenth round.

The mashed-nose Zivic, master of every ring artifice, suffered the second kayo of his long life in the ring when the slightly confused referee, Arthur Donovan, stopped the battle after Fritzie suddenly sagged numbly to the canvas after seemingly weathering a blizzard of Robinson leather.

Luke Carney, Zivic's fat manager, waddled indignantly into the ring and screamed passionately at Donovan that "we" weren't hurt—and that the fight should not have been stopped.

But Fritzie didn't seem to mind the armistice. He had gone down for a nine count in the ninth round, after being hit with one of the cleanest right-hand punches you ever read about. And he had gone down on his face, and staggered up with it breaded with rosin. The bell saved him, but it was apparent then that for all his guile he was through.

The last of the fighting Zivics, who unseated the great Henry Arm-

Byron Nelson Leads Field At Oakland

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 16.—Like a handicap horse stuck in with a bunch of selling platers, Byron Nelson galloped away from the field today in the second round of the 72-hole $5000 Oakland Open golf tournament.

The husky, iron shot master from Toledo, Ohio, clubbed another subpar round from the Sequoyah course and at the 36-hole mark posted a 136 for a four-stroke advantage over his closest rivals.

Nelson tacked a 69 on to his opening round 67 to draw away from a field that numbers most of the outstanding players in the country. He started weakly and finished like a champion, a distinction he has held in the past.

The former National Open and P. G. A. titleholder three-putted the first green for a bogey 5, then rattled off even pars for the rest of the nine, for a 36.

On the incoming stretch he chalked up a birdie three on the

Hockey Eagles Rally and Tie Rovers, 2 to 2

By Jack Munhall

Sustained through the first two periods only by the sensational netminding of pudgy Craig McClelland, the Washington Eagles flashed back with two final-period goals last night to hold the New York Rovers to a 2-to-2 overtime deadlock in a lightning-fast Eastern Amateur match at Riverside Stadium.

A paying crowd of 2812, who contributed a considerabie sum to the Washington Post Blood Bank Fund, gave McClelland ovation after ovation as fought off endless New York attacks in perhaps the season's greatest goal-tending job here. The exact amount that the blood bank will benefit from 10 per cent of the gross receipts was not immediately known.

The Eagles, trailing, 2 to 0, going into the third period, summoned up their two tying goals within six minutes, Kenny Ullyot ending their scoring famine at 2:06, and Veteran Len Burrage firing the equalizer at 5:57. New York had put in its pair of counters in the second period after McClelland had spent almost the whole first period grabbing a torrent of pucks rained upon him from all directions.

Howie Hollinger got loose in 33 seconds of the second session to install New York in a 1-0 lead. One

Terps' Surge At End Edges Sho'men, 28-25

Scoring seven field goals in the closing four minutes, Maryland's basketball team pulled away to a 28-25 victory over Washington College last night at College Park.

It was the Terps' eleventh straight victory over the Shoremen in their long series and their third of the season.

What might have been the key to the visitors' near upset was the ability of two nimble defense men to tie up the Terps' high-stepping Ernie Travis. After Travis dropped in the first score, Jim Stevens and Jerry Vaith set on him and held him scoreless from the floor until all but four minutes of the game had elapsed.

Trailing 6-1 after five minutes of play, the Shoremen solved the Terps' zone defense and moved into a 10-10 tie with just a minute left in the half. A pot shot by Francis McNiff, with a minute to go, gave the visitors a 12-10 advantage at the half and they were not headed until the Terps made their late bid.

President Says U. S. Needs Its Baseball

Roosevelt, in Letter to Judge Landis, Urges Continuance and More Night Games

President Roosevelt erased the worries of organized baseball's club owners, players and fans yesterday by bestowing his approval on their game as a wartime need of the Nation.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early made known Mr. Roosevelt's attitude on baseball during the war by quoting from a letter written by the President to Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

The reply to Landis was in answer to the baseball commissioner's request for a White House opinion on perpetuation of the game during war time, at a period when major league teams were preparing to go South for training. Early did not make public the full text of Mr. Roosevelt's letter, but he disclosed that the President was heartily in favor of perpetuation of the game.

The President classified baseball as a definite recreational asset to the Nation in time of stress and heartened the club owners by suggesting increased emphasis on night games to permit attendance by defense workers.

The Nation will benefit by maintenance of the organized sport, the President wrote Landis, pointing out that the game offers recreational opportunities with little cost and time. "Three hundred teams using between 5000 and 6000 players are a positive recreational asset to as many as 20 million people," the President stated.

After disclosing that the Chief Executive favored continuance of the game, the letter went on to say:

"As to the players themselves, I know you agree with me that individual players who are of active military or naval age should go, without question, into the services. Even if the actual quality of the teams is lowered by the greater use of older players, this will not dampen the popularity of the sport. Of course, if any individual has some particular aptitude in a trade or profession, he ought to serve the Government. That, however, is a matter which I know you can handle with complete justice."

The President's suggestion that

Loyola Cagers Easily Defeat C. U., 50-33

Loyola of Baltimore's courtmen stepped into a big early lead at Brookland last night and easily took their second victory of the year from Catholic U., 50-33. The score of the first encounter, played in Baltimore, was 58 to 28. C. U., therefore, had the consolation of a net three-point improvement.

Early in the game Loyola led, 24-10. Then the Cardinal combination, led by Fred Rice, son of a former C. U. coach, rallied to make it 26-20 (Loyola) at the half. Rice and Dick Scanlon, center, scored more than two-thirds of the local team's points.

Play in the second half was ragged, with the visitors gradually drawing away. Vinnie Bock and Thobe, at center, combined for 33 of the invaders' points.

The Cards, who now hold a won five, lost three record, meet Western Maryland at Westminster in their next game on January 21.

President's Message to Judge Landis

WASHINGTON

January 15, 1942.

My dear Judge:-

Thank you for yours of January fourteenth. As you will, of course, realise the final decision about the baseball season must rest with you and the Baseball Club owners -- so what I am going to say is solely a personal and not an official point of view.

I honestly feel that it would be best for the country to keep baseball going. There will be fewer people unemployed and everybody will work longer hours and harder than ever before.

And that means that they ought to have a chance for recreation and for taking their minds off their work even more than before.

Baseball provides a recreation which does not last over two hours or two hours and a half, and which can be got for very little cost. And, incidentally, I hope that night games can be extended because it gives an opportunity to the day shift to see a game occasionally.

As to the players themselves, I know you agree with me that individual players who are of active military or naval age should go, without question, into the services. Even if the actual quality of the teams is lowered by the greater use of older players, this will not dampen the popularity of the sport. Of course, if any individual has some particular aptitude in a trade or profession, he ought to serve the Government. That, however, is a matter which I know you can handle with complete justice.

Here is another way of looking at it -- if 300 teams use 5,000 or 6,000 players, these players are a definite recreational asset to at least 20,000,000 of their fellow citizens -- and that in my judgment is thoroughly worthwhile.

With every best wish,

Very sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Hon. Kenesaw M. Landis,
333 North Michigan Avenue,
Chicago,
Illinois.

Pounds and Ounces Roll South

Pieces of Haight:

Dear Boss:

And so, reluctantly, we drove into Miami—your handy man, Haight, and my handy man, Jake.

And, as was the case last year, when my car was brand new and I couldn't go over 35 miles an hour for the first 500 miles, I had my troubles soothing Jake this time. In the first place, I decided to take a a new route, through Charlotte, N. C., then to Columbia, S. C., and on to Augusta and Jacksonville.

HAIGHT

Jake did his best to change my plans. "You're going to end up in New Orleans," warned Jake as I swung over Memorial Bridge and headed for Culpeper. But Jake had hardly become reconciled to the new order when he noticed I was lagging along at 45 miles an hour.

He leaned over, peered at the speedometer, and said "Come on, let's get going. Last year you gave me this slow stuff this and that. Ain't this thing broke in yet? How about doing six bits?"

"No, Jake, I can't go 75," I replied. "We got to take it easy on account of rubber."

"Listen," came back Jake. "We ain't sightseeing. We're going to Florida. This ain't no rubber-neck. War times, hard times—I got to get to Miami to sell my pictures. Do you want me to get stuck with them? Ain't things bad enough now, with millionaires turning me around?"

I tried to explain to Jake that they were rationing tires and that I would have a hard time getting even second-hand ones when mine were worn out. "Oh, you're worried about tires? Forget them. I know where you can get millions of them."

I changed the subject to my signing a player's contract with the Washington Ball Club. I told him that the Nats had lost Travis to the draft and that I was going to try to play shortstop. Jake listened, then frowned and said, "You're getting too many rackets. First you get horses, then you get footballs and now you get baseballs. Don't try to play baseball. Get in that office. Get in there with Mr. Griffith and Mr. Eynon. Get in there where they count the money. Get in there where you can get some passes."

An auto horn sounded behind us. Jake looked back. "Don't

$5.60 Shot Beats Out Pig Tails

Son Islam Is Third In Feature; James Rushes Victor Home By a Half Length

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 16.—Sir War, flying the Circle M Ranch banner of Wyoming's Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Moore, began his 3-year-old campaign with a popular and hard-earned triumph in the Tamiami Purse here this afternoon. A $5.60 for $2 choice in the field of six, the bay son of Sir Gallahad III got up under Basil James' powerful pushing to score by a half length over H. P. Headley's filly, Pig Tails, a stakes winner at Empire City last summer.

Son Islam, representing James B. Campbell, lost second money by a length. The winner covered the 6 furlongs in 1:13 flat under topweight of 116 pounds.

As on the other two days of the new meeting, the attendance again topped that for the same day in 1941. Today's turnstile count was 7716, against 7463 a year ago.

Sir War last started in the Walden Stakes at Pimlico, when he finished a trailer, proving no match for Champion Alsab and others in the fall fixture. Before that, however, he was a double winner at Laurel.

Pig Tails broke on her toes in today's headliner, with Son Islam nearest in pursuit. They remained a length apart until after entering the stretch. Then Son Islam and Sir War, the latter previously rated not far behind, drew up with the pacemaker. Sir War was going away once he got to the front.

Don Meade, leading rider of 1941, canceled his mounts today, being reported the victim of a touch of ptomaine poisoning.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Maria Link, Brazilian swimming ace, celebrates her twenty-sixth birthday in New York Thursday night by sprinting across the finish line in the 220-yard breast-stroke event in an exhibition meet in 3:5.8. This bettered the American record of 3:7.1, set in 1941 by Patty Aspinall, of Indianapolis. Miss Link and her five companions from South America competed against picked squads from New York clubs. It was the sixteenth and final appearance of a four-week tour in the United States for the South Americans

Md. Boxers Face Coast Guard

Maryland's boxing squad left yesterday afternoon for New London, Conn., where the Terps will battle the United States Coast Guard Academy team tonight.

The Terps will stick to the same line-up that tied South Carolina last week, 4-all, with the exception that Harry Fisher will replace Jack Gilmore, 165-pounder, who suffered a cut eye in his match with the Gamecocks. Fisher, a soph, will give away weight, as he scales only 158. He prepped at Central High.

Others to make the trip in tow of Coach Bobby Goldstein and Manager Harold Smelser were:

This will be the third meeting between the teams, with Maryland winning last year 4-3 at New London after a 4-4 battle in 1928 at College Park. One of the 1941 bouts was ruled no contest because of a first round injury.

With Fisher in the line-up, the Maryland boxers are equally divided between Washington and Baltimore, the other District boys being Cicala, Lincoln and Jones. Fisher will be making his first appearance in competition. Alperstein, Quinn, Gunther and Rodman are from the Monumental City.

Stellar Swim Field to Vie Here Tonight

One of the flashiest fields ever assembled in Washington for an indoor meet will compete in the Shoreham Hotel's annual midwinter open swimming meet today and tonight in the Shoreham pool.

Four colleges and 11 clubs have entered representatives and the list has been added to by a number of independent, unattached swimmers. More than 100 in all will compete, making it the biggest affair of its kind in that respect.

Ten events are scheduled, two for national junior A. A. U. championships. The District A. A. U. has sanctioned the affair and is cooperating with Shoreham officials in making it a success.

Teams entered are from as far away as Indianapolis, which is sending a couple of specialists from the Hoosier A. C., and Brooklyn, N. Y., home of the formidable St. Georges Dragon Club. North Carolina, Virginia Tech, St. Joseph's, of Philadelphia, and Catholic University are the colleges entered.

Coach Jake Hengstler's Ambassador Hotel team boasts the largest number of entries with 31 boys and girls on the list. Second in this respect is the host Shoreham team, coached by Dudley Gordon.

Preliminary heats are scheduled this afternoon at 4 o'clock and finals will get under way promptly at 8 p. m.

Minnesota Followers Give Bierman Banquet

Minenapolis, Minn., Jan. 16 (U.P.)—More than 700 Minnesota "Monday morning quarterbacks" from Gov. Harold E. Stassen to end zone rooters tonight feted Bernie Bierman, Gopher coach, who left later for Quantico, Va., to enter active service as a major in the Marine Corps Sunday.

A member of the Reserve, he was notified just before the East-West game at New Orelans, January 3, that he would be called into active service.

Massanutten Swimmers Win, 39-27

Massanutten Military Academy handed the Wilson High School swimmers a 39-27 setback yesterday at the Ambassador Hotel pool. The winners' Elliott smashed the pool record in the 100-yard freestyle.

The summary:

50-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Atchison (Wilson); second, tie between Trutman (Wilson) and Roland (Massanutten). Time, 25.4 seconds.

100-YARD BREASTSTROKE—Won by Hiltz (Wilson); second, Watson (Massanutten); third, Montague (Wilson). Time, 1:10.5.

Jake Asks More Speed From Haight

pay no attention to them," he scowled, "Maryland tags on car. Baltimore rats on the way to Hialeah to tout."

When the car drove alongside of us, one of the fellows in the back rolled down his window and shouted, "Hey Jake! Since when do they let guys like you ride in the front seat?"

Jake reached in his pocket, pulled out a card and waved it at his heckler, shouting, "He'll get you! He knows you! If Walter didn't have to save rubber or something, you rats wouldn't pass us."

Jake kept waving the card at them as long as the rear of their car was in sight. Then he settled down to a chant of "He'll get them," which finally died down to a series of grunts as he put the card back in its envelope.

"Let me see that card, Jake?" I asked.

He handed me the envelope, addressed to Jake Jacobs. I slipped the card out and it was the Christmas greeting of Edgar G. Hoover!

Jake's experience in this case reminds me of a day that he rode to Pimlico with Art Brown and me. Brown had just purchased a new blue Lincoln and, although as Jake put it, "I could get a million rides," he could not resist the temptation to have full charge of the rear seat of that big, sporty car. Jake saw a track acquaintance standing on the corner. Ye yelled to him, "Hey, there! How'ya doing?" What Jake meant, of course, was "How'm I doing?" The fellow looked him over rather sarcastically and asked, "You got plenty of sand in there with you?"

Well, Boss, Jake didn't seem to get the wisecrack. He kept repeating it over and over. "Sand—sand—what do I want with sand?" he asked himself. Brown knew and I knew that Jake's friend was referring to sand to keep him from slipping out.

Despite the fact that we had never been over the route we were taking to Florida, we got off the course only once. We were taking Route No. 21 from Charlotte in the dark and Jake was checking the road markers. We made a turn and the paving began getting bad. I questioned Jake about it and he said, "There was a big '21' back there."

I felt something was wrong so we turned and went back. There as a "21" at the turn, all right, but there was "8110" painted in some numerals in back of it. If gas had been selling for 22 cents we wouldn't have gone wrong.

By the way, Boss, Jake sends his best regards to Tony Neri and the boys in the sports department, Steve Early and his friends at the White House and Kingie and the bunch on Ninth Street.

Democracy, thy name must be "Jake."

MIAMI HAIGHT.

P. S.—Send me a long piece of rope. I've lost the belt to my bathing trunks.

Petersburg Beats Friends, 36 to 32

Though far out in front most of the time, Petersburg (W. Va.) High basketers were forced to cling to a slim lead last night to down Sidwell-Friends five, 36-32, on the local floor.

By halftime the invaders had amassed a 14-5 margin, but the hosts warmed up as action progressed. Buschmeyer's pair of long shots brought Friends up close, but not close enough, as the game ended.

"Cotton" Smith, the locals' ace scorer, was tops in that department again with 16 points, 3 better than Petersburg's best, Sears.

Hoya Hockey Team Meets Diplomats

Temple having canceled its schedule, Georgetown University's hockey team will meet Franklin and Marshall in place of the Owls tonight at 8:30 at Riverside Stadium.

The Hoyas, undefeated and averaging eight goals for their three matches, will be facing a formidable opponent in the visitors from Lancaster, Pa., who are leading contenders for the title of the Eastern Pennsylvania League.

The Hoyas and the Diplomats crossed hockey sticks last year and 3000 local fans watched Georgetown pour through four final-period goals to win, 6-1.

Parochial League Sets 5 Games

Five games are scheduled in the Parochial League Sunday at Gonzaga gym. In what should be the headliner, Holy Name will meet St. Michael. Other contests listed are: St. Joseph vs. St. James; St. Anthony vs. Blessed Sacrament; Sacred Heart vs. Lady of Lourdes; and St. Gabriel vs. St. Aloysius.

Bernie Nolan, a member of Gonzaga High School's varsity, will officiate at the games.

Baseball Men Hail Request Of President

By International News Service

Chicago, Jan. 16.—"Good news," was the reaction tonight of baseball men and baseball fans to President Roosevelt's letter to Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis in which he stated:

"I honestly feel that it would be best for the country to keep baseball going."

Of particular interest to the major league magnates was the President's expressed desire that more night games than the seven now permitted each club be scheduled.

Pointing out that people will be working longer hours and harder than ever before, "and that means they ought to have a chance for recreation and for taking their minds off their work," the President wrote Judge Landis:

"Incidentally, I hope that night games can be extended because it gives an opportunity to the day shift to see a game occasionally."

A Break for Browns

American League President William Harridge said this week that the club owners at their New York meeting next month will consider the plight of the St. Louis Browns and their plea for more night games to bolster their depleted treasury.

Don Barnes, president of the Browns, said tonight in St. Louis after reading the President's letter:

"Great. Fine. Now I'll have a stronger selling point on this matter when I meet with my colleagues in New York."

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, was quoted as saying that, in view of the President's letter, he would write Landis asking permission to schedule more night games.

One of the most outspoken opponents to playing more than seven night games when the question came up at the joint major league meeting in Chicago last month was President Alvah Bradley of the Cleveland Indians. But he recanted tonight, and said that in view of President Roosevelt's letter he had reconsidered his opposition. He added consideration of a 14-game night schedule for each park equipped with lights would be the first order of business of the New York meeting.

Cubs Ready for Lights

The homes of all major league clubs except the Chicago Cubs, New York Yankees, Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox are equipped with lights.

The Cubs have always been apathetic over night baseball, but General Manager Jim Gallagher said tonight:

"We can have lights installed and ready to function in Wrigley Field by mid-April—if the materials aren't needed in war work."

Gallagher's statement brought up another problem. Most of the lighting equipment is manufactured in Chicago, but one manufacturer said, none can be delivered unless current priorities are altered. He added that the criticism that night baseball "consumes too much electric power" is "silly when you consider that the absence from their homes of from 20,000 to 50,000 spectators would result in a saving rather than a loss of current."

But regardless of the question of baseball under the lights, baseball men accepted the President's letter as giving the national game "the green light" for 1942, at least.

Hopes Faith Is Justified

Judge Landis in a statement issued from his Chicago office, said: "I hope that our performance will be such as to justify the President's faith."

Harridge said:

"The President's letter confirms the conviction held by all baseball men that the national pastime has a definite place in the welfare of our country, particularly during times of stress."

"It should encourage all of us," was the comment of Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"The White Sox will contribute a 100 per cent effort in everything that will aid our country," Mrs. Grace Comiskey, president of the Sox, said.

"Good news, great news," was the reaction of President Ed Barrow of the Yankees, in New York, while the Dodgers' Larry MacPhail observed, "baseball can contribute a lot in these times."

"Excellent," was the way the Athletics' venerable Connie Mack summed it up.

D. C. Table Tennis Meet Slated Today

The fourth ranking tournament by the District of Columbia Table Tennis Association will start today at 3 p. m. on the Columbia table tennis courts, Fourteenth and Monroe Streets Northwest. There will be no admission charge to spectators. Finals will be held in the evening.

In the absence of Champion Stanley Fields there is no definite favorite for the men's division of the tournament. Lou Gorin, the District's No. 2 player; Elias Schuman, No. 3, and Norman Dancy, No. 4, each has won one previous tournament. Others who may spring a surprise include Jimmy Shea, Johnny Limerick and Bobby Bensinger.

In the women's division, Jane Staufer and Carolyn Wilson are favored to enter the finals.

INTERHIGH STANDINGS

Anacostia	0	3	.000

An interhigh basketball doubleheader scheduled for tonight was moved up to yesterday at Eastern gym and provided the most stunning result in four games played in the annual public high school series.

Eastern's five, a preseason favorite and one of the oldest scholastic organizations in the city, tasted the medicine ladled out by a Calvin Coolidge quintet which is seeing its first action in the league, 27-21.

The other end of the bill went to Central, 24-21, after Anacostia had registered one of the major scares of the season.

In the originally scheduled double bill at Tech gym, Roosevelt's 1939-40 and 1940-41 titlists kept this year's record untarnished in the headliner with a 28-26 edge on Wilson's powerhouse. The opener went to Western easily, 33-21, with Tech on the short end.

Thus the Vikings of Central remained at the top of the standings with three triumphs. Roosevelt retained second place, but third went to Coolidge as Eastern and Wilson dropped down.

Colts Hand Eastern Team Third Defeat

With three straight upsets behind it, one in the series, Eastern's cagers were expected to come out swinging, but that failed to worry the Colts. They jockeyed for position for three quarters and then clinched the outcome with a torrid last-period sprint.

It was blustery Bill Penn who led the winning spree, sinking a pair of baskets as the winners held the Tide to a single point in the last eight minutes and built up a 22-20 margin they held going into it. The other point went to Addy Bassin on a foul shot.

Except for that big last session, the game was a toss-up. Eastern was out front by 6-4 and 10-9 after the first two periods, and trailed by only 2 points going into the last.

Penn's final rush brought him scoring honors for the game with 9 points. Leading Eastern's scoring as well as its passing game was Larry Capone, who accounted for 8 points.

Koester's Basket Wins for Riders

Never more than three points separated the forces of Roosevelt and Wilson as they squared off in the feature game at Tech. In the end, it was a "lay-up" shot by Dick Koester, a converted gridman, which broke a 26-26 deadlock and kept the Riders undefeated in the series.

Wilson, with five straight triumphs on its pre-series record, battled the defending champions right down to the wire, matching them point for point.

The whole game revolved around the winners' Frank Redinger and Wilson's Don Hillock, and just as his team nosed out the brilliant youngsters of Wilson, Redinger barely edged out Hillock for scoring honors. His 14-point total was one point better than Hillock's mark.

It was Redinger who bore the brunt of the Rider assault in the first period as the teams alternated scoring. It was 9-9 at the end of that session, and it was still tied at 13-13 at the half.

Central Comes From Behind for Victory

Central may have been given a scare as it took its third straight triumph, but it survived that nicely.

The score was 16-9 favoring Anacostia as the teams lined up to start the final quarter. The Vikings had steadily dropped back after trailing, 16-9, at intermission.

Then Johnny Gibbons and Bob Hill went to work, accounting for points that made the difference in winning and losing.

The Indians' courageous stand was led by Paul Benner and Elmer Leukhardt, the first of which shared scoring laurels with Central's Teddy Thomaides. Each managed for 9 points.

Western Begins Early In Downing Tech

Apparently irked by an overtime beating in their only previous start, Western's cagers went to work on the Trainers early, locking matters up for the half after a slow first quarter.

Behind the customary clever shooting of Jimmy Karas and the excellent floor work of Donny Cross, the Raiders improved on a 4-2 first-period margin to make it 13-6 at the half. From there in it was a pleasant stroll.

Karas accounted for 13 of the winning points, easily high for the game, while Hank Pizza was pacing a tireless but ineffective Tech attack with 8 points.

Landon Beats Boys' Latin Here, 18 to 10

Landon opened its interstate academic conference play yesterday with an 18-10 victory over Bay's Latin of Baltimore on the Landon court. It was Landon's second victory in three games.

The game was marked by close guarding by both teams, the visiting forwards failing to register a single basket. Landon led, 6-5, at the half and was able to score but 12 points after the intermission.

Devereux, Landon forward, with 11 points, was high scorer of the game. Brawner, of Landon, and Brooks, of Boys' Latin, scored four each.

strong to win the title and then lost it to well-liked and well-licked Freddie Cochrane, won only one round on the International News Service score sheet. But his consummate mastery of every fair and foul ring science forced Robinson to fight the best fight of his meteoric career to win.

Robinson's victory tonight, his twenty-seventh victory in 27 fights as a pro, earned him a crack at Cochrane's title. The 145-pounders will meet February 20 for the benefit of the President's Infantile Paralysis Fund—which would have done well tonight if it had been declared "in" on the gate, for the Robinson-Zivic quarrel lured 15,475 fans into the blacked-out Garden. Pastor Signs to Fight Lesnevich in Garden

Heavyweight Replaces Injured Lou Nova In 12-Rounder, Feb. 6; Pastor Fights Here

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today that Bob Pastor had been signed to fight Light-Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich at Madison Square Garden, February 6, after Lou Nova, who was scheduled to meet Lesnevich in a 12-rounder, had been forced to withdraw because of a training injury.

Pastor also is slated to meet Lem Franklin at Cleveland, February 28, but his manager Jimmy Johnston, said Bob would be able to go through with both bouts.

(Pastor will fight Claudio Villar, Spanish heavyweight, Monday night in the main event of Promoter Joe Turner's initial show of the year at the W Street arena. Pastor has also been mentioned as a likely opponent for Lee Savold in a fight here.)

Nova pulled a costal cartilege under a rib while going through calisthenics. He remained in the hospital overnight and his doctor said he would be unable to resume training for at least three weeks.

tenth for a 3-foot putt and knocked in a 6-footer for a birdie three on the fifteenth. He missed a 3-foot try on the eighteenth for what would have been another birdie but the par gave him a nine-hole 33 and one of the day's few under-par rounds.

On his two-day performance, Nelson stamped himself as the one to beat and encouraged the belief he has shaken the jinx that has trailed him during nine years of competition in California winter tournaments. He's never won one in this State yet, always cracking somewhere along the line.

The tournament favorite, until his boyhood rival, Nelson, moved in, was Ben Hogan, of Hershey, Pa. They served together as caddies in Fort Worth, Tex., and the rivalry has continued as they attained starring roles on the links.

Hogan, after a solid 68 yesterday, faltered today and came in with a 72. He lost the edge off his usually feathery putting touch.

Tied with Hogan in the 140-class were Lawson Little, San Francisco; Lloyd Mangrum, of Monterey Park, Calif.; Denny Shute, former P. G. A. and British Open champion; Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, and Chick Harbert, up-and-coming youngster from Battle Creek, Mich.

The golf produced today showed a general improvement over the first round, but only three were able to beat par. Besides the pace setter, Nelson, they included Willie Goggin, of New York, and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., each carding 69.

Defending Champion Leonard Dodson, of Kansas City, found the going tough and turned in a 75 for a two-round total of 145. So did Jimmy Demaret and Sam Snead, first ranking men, who landed in the same bracket. Demaret had a 73 and Snead a 72. Demaret missed a 1-foot putt on the sixteenth.

The field was trimmed after today's round to the 90 low scorers.

Benefit Game Slated Today At Episcopal

Alexandria, Jan. 16.—Episcopal High School cagers and the St. Paul's School quint, of Baltimore, will perform for the benefit of Grantland Rice's sports fund for infantile paralysis tomorrow afternoon at Episcopal's Centennial Gym at 3:30. The entire proceeds of the contest will be turned over to the paralysis fund.

Episcopal will go into the contest in quest of its third consecutive victory, having won decisions from St. Alban's and Landon in its first two starts. The Maroons have succeeded in polishing off most of the rough spots which resulted from mid-semester holidays, and will send a well-balanced, veteran quint against the Baltimoreans.

St. Paul's boasts one of its strongest teams in recent years, and will invade the Episcopal gym with a record of five victories in six starts.

Hyattsville Five Tops N.T.S., 39-32

Rody Kidwell and Bill Sideroff, who scored 15 and 14 points, respectively, paced Hyattsville High School's 39-32 victory over the National Training School five yesterday on the losers' floor.

In marking up its third victory in seven games Hyattsville led, 9-5, at the end of the first quarter and 21-14 at intermission. Minor Pierce was best for the losers with 10 points.

The Mount Rainier jayvees whipped Hyattsville's jayvee quintet, 24 to 10, on the victors' court for their third straight victory yesterday as Mickey Flynn, sharp-shooting forward, led the Rainier attack with 12 points.

Maryland Golf Body Votes to Aid Defense

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, Jan. 16.—The Maryland State Golf Association last night voted unanimously to carry on in 1942 as far as war time and transportation restrictions would permit, play a number of Red Cross and war relief benefits and award all prizes in defense stamps and bonds.

This decision was reached at the association's annual meeting at the Baltimore Country Club's Roland Park branch.

Dr. Robert A. Keilty, first vice president from the Congressional Country Club, offered the motion as incoming tournament chairman and it was immediately passed without a dissenting vote. The State body spent $2032 in prizes last year and although entries are bound to fall off during the coming season, at least $1500 will likely be paid out in defense savings bonds and stamps.

The association intends to go on with a majority of the major affairs, although dropping many of the intercity events due to the 90-odd mile round trip on the final set of tires available to most participants.

The spring four-ball championship, the intercity amateur and junior team matches and a number of the one-day affairs will be canceled, but the major affairs such as the Amateur, Open, Junior, State Women's and fall team championships will go on as usual. The fall team play will be changed to Washington and Baltimore clubs staging an intracity series and the winners meeting for the title, as suggested several years ago.

Edgar M. Lucas, vice president and treasurer and tournament chairman last year and the choice of the nominating committee for president, was moved into office with the entire slate by the usual unanimous vote. John R. Daily, past president of Manor Club and a member of the nominating committee, read off the following incoming officers which were approved:

Bergelin Voted In

Dr. Keilty, first vice president; Nathan R. Smith, Elkridge, vice president; Harry G. Pitt, Manor, vice president; Charles F. Catherman, Cumberland, vice president; A. Herman Stump, Green Spring Valley, vice president; John D. Hospelhorn, C. C. of Maryland, vice president and treasurer; Albert E. Steinem, Woodholme, general counsel and Emmett Gary, Hillandale, secreary.

The Washington district gained a vice president in John O. Bergelin, chairman of the greens committee of Kenwood Country Club, who was voted on the slate at the motion of Hospelhorn.

The Washington district will also be host to the meeting every other year and will alternate presidents with the Baltimore clubs beginning next year. Bergelin was added to the vice presidents to succeed Keilty and Pitt as District of Columbia presidents.

A motion to hold the meeting the third Friday in March instead of the present date, the third Friday in January, was beaten by an overwhelming vote.

Wiffy, Cox, president of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. and Congressional Club pro, attended the twenty-first annual meeting at the invitation of the State body and expressed the pros' willingness to cooperate with plans to award defense bonds as prizes instead of golf shop merchandise. He also expressed a desire to work out a plan to hold but ten amateur-pro tournaments during the season between his group and the State body, five in each city.

The Old Line group will go in with the U. S. G. A. in staging benefit tournaments on the three summer national holidays.

Lucas admitted the game faces trying times, what with the induction of star players, lack of time to play, a caddy shortage, decrease in income and golf balls and tire shortages, but he felt the State body had a duty to perform in keeping America's favorite recreation alive and that it could help out with Red Cross and Army and Navy benefit affairs and the purchase of bonds.

High Schools Here To Revise Sports Code

Three Major Changes Anticipated; Playing Seasons May Be Extended

By Bill Burnett

The public high schools of Washington will be given a radically revised, clarified and modernized set of athletic rules within the next few weeks, it was learned last night by The Post.

The new code will replace that put into effect in 1935-36 by Birch Bayh, former head of the public schools' physical education, who is now serving the country's armed forces in a civilian position at Bolling Field.

First steps toward altering and clearing up the list of rules, which has been a source of contention since its inception, were made recently when Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, appointed a three-man committee to undertake a rewrite job. Principal Charles Hart, of Eastern, is acting as chairman and his aides are Principal Frank C. Daniel, of McKinley, and Principal Walter L. Smith, of Dunbar High School.

Suggestions Considered

Already the committee has undergone one session with the board of principals, which must pass or kill the new code, and approximately one-third of the committee's suggestions have been considered. Completion and announcement of the new code now await the return to duty of Dr. Holmes, who is ill.

Three major changes in the present rules are anticipated, though one authoritative observer says that a start will be made with only two. And of the latter, only one has been presented the governing body by Hart's committee.

That is the game-limit rule now in operation, inserted by Bayh along with numerous other amendments in an effort to keep the schoolboys from taking too large doses of athletics. As it now stands, each high school team is limited to 8 football games, 18 basketball games, 12 baseball games and 5 track meets.

Under the new set-up, the football season would be extended to nine games, basketball to 24 games, baseball to 15 games and track to 6 meets.

Further revision, several sources believe, may affect such contested clauses as the 19-year age limit, the practice limit covering all sports, the strict ruling against postseason contests, and numerous other points. All these, at any rate, are expected to be clarified to avoid conflict over their meaning.

British Army Officers to Ride In Myer Show

By Anne Hagner.

Jumping classes for the President's Birthday Horse Show took on a definite international flavor last night as five English officers, attached to the British army staff here, accepted the invitations of Fort Myer committee heads to school Third Cavalry horses for the infantile paralysis benefit at the Army post January 28 and 29.

Although they have been out of the saddle for two years because they have been needed in mechanized divisions by their country, the Englishmen whipped back into form so rapidly that, barring unexpected occurances, their entries are virtually assurred for the horse show.

Like Course

They are Maj. R. Bramwell-Davis, Capt. P. Arkwright, Maj. Lyons, Capt. G. Michols and Maj. E. Jayne, all of whom have been in this country only since August. Despite their long lay-off and the difficulty of jumping unfamiliar horses, the officers found Fort Myer horses entirely to their liking and turned in many smooth rounds over stiff practice courses.

In addition to the foreign motif, it was learned yesterday that Gordon Wright, widely known horseman from New York, will bring down a vanload of open jumpers for the show, prefering to aid the infantile paralysis cause here than to stay in the North to prepare for a show there January 30 and 31.

Maj. Charles B. McClelland, jr., manager of the President's Birthday outfit, said last night that he expected Wright would import Mrs. Elizabeth Correll's brilliant Lew Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Merrill's Thunder Boy, and one or two other good leapers.

Mrs. Perry to Ride

From Virginia came word that Mrs. W. Haggin Perry plans to ride in open jumping classes and that Col. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, of Berryville, will bring four horses for both hunter and jumper events. The Greenhalgh string will be ridden by its former trainer, Shirley Payne, who was drafted in September and will be making his first show ring appearance since then. He is now a private at Fort Myer.

Schaefer Regains Cue Touch, Beats Lookabaugh, 50-43

By International News Service

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Jake Schaefer, Cleveland's balk-line expert, regained his winning touch today after dropping three out of his first four matches in the world's three-cushion billiards tournament, and defeated Earle Lookabaugh, of Chicago, 50 to 43, in 52 innings.

Schaefer's win over Lookabaugh completed a rout of the tournament's erstwhile "Giant Killers," for Arthur Thurnblad, of Kenosha, Wis., beat Arthur Rubin, of Brooklyn, 50 to 40, in 57 innings in an earlier match.

Last night, Lookabaugh and Rubin staged the two greatest upsets of the tournament to date. Earle beat former Champion Welker Cochran, 50 to 48, in a 58-inning thriller, and Rubin defeated defending Champion Willie Hoppe, 50 to 39, in 39 innings.

Eagles Rally, Tie Rovers, 2-2

of the fleetest of the fastest skating team in the league, Hollinger darted through the Washington defense to follow up a shot by Red Tilson. The puck had been fed Tilson by Gordon Medynski.

More than 16 minutes ensued then before the Rovers switched on the red light again, Arthur Kendall sliding the puck under McClelland's legs after several players had piled up at the mouth of the net.

All this time the Eagles' play had not been what you'd describe as sensational; so far from sensational, in fact, that a heckler yelled to coach Red Mackenzie: "What's the matter, your team on a strike?"

Hickey Scores

But the answer to that question was supplied with startling suddenness. As if in the Dr. Jekyll role of the well-known act, Washington loosed an attack that swept the Rovers back. Les Hickey launched the first scoring play, stick-handling the puck nicely down into one corner of the New York defensive zone. Entrapped, he back-handed the puck to Ullyot, who had followed him, and skinny Kenny gave everyone a scare by almost tripping over the puck before he pushed it in for the goal.

Incredible was the word for Burrage's tying shot, for it scooted under the legs of no fewer than half a dozen players of both teams in its flight of some 25 feet. Marty Madore started the scoring maneuver, taking the puck into New York territory. He fed it to Odi Hallowell, the Eagles' rapidly improving young winger. Hallowell couldn't get away a shot and in desperation he passed the puck to where he thought a teammate should be. And the reliable old Burrage was there, but even then it if seemed as if the gesture were vain, for a solid wall of sticks, legs and padding separated Burrage from the nets. But he whacked the puck and the darned thing apparently didn't hit anything or anybody as it traveled a straight line into the cage.

With renewed vigor both teams then bent to the task of unraveling the scoring knot, but just as their attacks greatly accelerated both in speed and intensity, so the defense grew in ruggedness. There resulted the expected impasse.

Payroll Plan For War Bonds Expands Here

An analysis to determine the extent of the adoption of payroll savings plans by business establishments in the District of Columbia completed by the Treasury Department, through the office of the District of Columbia defense savings committee, indicates that considerable increase in the sales of defense bonds and stamps by means of such plans has been effected since the attack on Pearl Harbor.

District business establishments employing more than 30,000 persons have either already installed payroll savings plans or have such installations in process. Among these are:

Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., American Security & Trust Co., Association of American Railroads, Bond Clothing Co., Cafritz Co., Capital Transit Co., Carnegie Institute, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., Civic Education Service, Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Conserco, Inc., Dy-Dee Wash, the Evening Star, Federal Reserve Board, Fries, Beall & Sharp Co., Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., the Goldenberg Co., The Hecht Co., Frank R. Jelleff, Harry Kaufman, Inc., Maso-Lerch Co., National Geographic Society, Potomac Electric Power Co., Riggs National Bank, H. L. Rust Co., Southern Railway System, United Services Life Insurance Co., Washington Gas Light Co., Washington Law Book Co., Washington Terminal Co., Western Union Telegraph Co. and The Washington Post.

In addition, scores of smaller business units have devised original procedures that are popularizing the purchase of bonds.

Leading investment bankers of Washington have organized as a unit of the District of Columbia Defense Savings Committee to spur the sale of defense bonds, it was announced yesterday by John Saul, chairman of the banking and finance division of the District committee. Y. E. Booker, of Y. E. Booker Co., has been appointed chairman of the investment bankers section and James Parker Nolan, of Folger, Nolan & Co., has been named vice chairman.

Area Store Sales Up 20 Per Cent

Department store sales in the fifth Federal Reserve district showed a 20 per cent increase in 1941 as compared with the previous year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. The year's gain in Washington also was 20 per cent.

The State figures follow: Maryland, up 20 per cent; Virginia, up 20 per cent; West Virginia, up 18 per cent; North Carolina, up 17 per cent; South Carolina, up 26 per cent.

December store sales in 1941 compared as follows with the same month last year: Washington, up 17 per cent; Maryland, up 19 per cent; Virginia, up 17 per cent; West Virginia, up 16 per cent; North Carolina, up 12 per cent; South Carolina, up 24 per cent.

Title Firm Retains Heads

George H. O'Connor was reelected president and all other officers were retained at the annual meeting of the District Lawyers and Washington Title Insurance Companies. The officers' roster is: Vice presidents, James McD. Shea, Charles W. Stetson, Joseph N. Saunders, Francis E. Smith, jr., H. Harold Stine and Albert F. Miles; secretary-treasurer, Harry M. Packard; assistant secretary-treasurer, John H. Stadtler; assistant treasurer, E. Roy Hill.

Real Estate Bonds Drop

After 17 consecutive months without a decline in price, real estate bonds fell 4.47 per cent in December under pressure of wartime selling and yearend liquidation, according to the Ammott-Baker realty bond price index. The average includes four Washington issues, three of which showed dips. The fourth, Washington Properties, Inc. general income 7s of 1952, advanced one-half point.

6 Receiverships Closed

The Comptroller of Currency reported yesterday that liquidation of six insolvent national banks was completed in December and the receiverships closed. Among them was the Potomac Savings Bank of Washington, which closed in 1934.

The report showed that $2,691,702 was disbursed, or 81.7 per cent, to all claimants of the Potomac Bank.

Deposits up 40 Per Cent

Max Vollberg was reelected president of the Citizens Bank of Riverdale (Md.) at the annual meeting of directors this week and all other officers and directors likewise were retained. Mr. Vollberg reported that deposits during the year increased 40 per cent over the previous year.

Dog Can't Buy Defense Bonds

Cleveland, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Bank is sorry—it can't issue a $100 defense bond to "Pal."

M. J. Fleming, president of the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank, said "Pal" works for Caesar Moore's filling station and hot dog stand at Loyall, Ky., taking money from customers and giving it to Moore. Often "Pal," a German shepherd dog, gets tips. Keeping these tips until he had sufficient to purchase a bond, Moore sought to have it issue in "Pal's" name.

The bank had to decline, regretfully, because the dog "is not a real person."

Farm Price Rise Expected Not to Exceed 5%

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said yesterday it expected the general level of farm prices in 1942 to rise only about 5 per cent above the apparent present level.

A somewhat smaller increase in the level of prices of industrial products was predicted.

Economists said an increase of more than 5 per cent in the farm price level would have to be reached before any extensive use of price control ceilings would be required.

Only a limited number of farm products are now bringing producers as much as 110 per cent of parity, the minimum price ceiling recommended by the Administration. Many are bringing less than parity. Latest Agriculture Department reports show those averaging 110 per cent of parity or above included rice, cottonseed, cattle, lambs, wool and tobacco. Those bringing less than parity included corn, wheat, cotton, oats, hogs, eggs, chickens, milk and butter fat and peanuts.

"The greatest anti-inflationary influence on farm prices," said the bureau, "will be the higher level of production in 1942."

Attainment of the Agriculture Department's 1942 production goals—calling for a record output of food—should provide adequately, the bureau said, for a growing domestic demand and for lend-lease shipments to American allies.

The bureau said the department's present policy of selling such staples as wheat, corn and cotton was helping to stabilize prices. This policy, it said, presumably will be followed through 1942. Commodities involved in such sales were acquired under past grower loan programs. The department's selling prices have been and continue below the proposed price ceilings.

Exports Reach Average of 579 Million a Month

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that exports of war supplies and other merchandise reached a monthly average of 579 million dollars in October and November.

Total shipments for the first 11 months of 1941 were $4,492,000,000—the highest figure for a similar period since the first World War. The figure was 21 per cent higher than corresponding figures in 1940.

Imports of merchandise averaged 292 million dollars in October and November, bringing the 11 month total to $3,002,000,000, the highest since 1937.

Under wartime restrictions, the department said no further details of foreign trade, particularly the nature of the commodities bought and sold or the countries involved, would be given out.

G. A. Ball Faces New Damage Suit For $3,000,000

Indianapolis, Jan. 16 (AP).—Another damage suit, this one for $3,000,000, was brought today against George A. Ball, millionaire Muncie industrialist, in connection with his disposal of the railroad empire built by the late M. J. and O. P. Van Sweringen, Cleveland brothers.

Attorneys for Robert R. Young and Allan P. Kirby, Eastern financiers, who bought the Van Sweringen properties from Ball, filed the action in Federal Court here. It seeks damages for alleged losses on miscellaneous securities which figured in the transactions by which Ball disposed in 1937 of the rail empire, of which he had gained control.

In a previous suit, still pending, Young, Kirby and the Seaboard Co., Ltd., asked $5,000,000 for alleged losses on Alleghany Corporation stock, the principal security involved in the transactions. The Seaboard company also is a plaintiff in the new suit.

Both suits allege a "breach of warranty" on the part of Ball and the George and Frances Ball Foundation.

Auto Output Rises in Week

Detroit, Jan. 16 (AP).—Production of the Nation's automotive plants advanced this week to 75,625 cars and trucks, Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today. This compared with 60,190 units last week and 124,025 assemblies this week a year ago.

The survey reported no increase from the current level of output could be expected, and stated the transition from civilian to military production was progressing speedily.

Railway Express Gross Up 23.6%

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Railway Express Agency today said gross revenue from express traffic over the Nation's major airlines in November, 1941, was 23.6 per cent over that of the same month a year ago.

Last November's total poundage handled, the agency said, was 951,831, an increase of 17 per cent over the previous November while the total number of shipments was 110,568, a 13.5 per cent rise.

Shoe Production Sets Record in December

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Record shoe production for last December was reported today by the Tanners' Council of America, which estimated 37,500,000 pairs were made, a total 18.6 per cent ahead of December 1940.

Aggregate for 1941 was 492,754,000 pairs, the report said, including 14,700,000 pairs for the armed forces.

Girdler Aide Named At Aircraft Plant

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 16 (AP).—George M. Williams, president of the Russell Manufacturing Co. of this city, left his post today to take over a war-time job at the Vultee-Consolidated Aircraft Corporation at San Diego, Calif.

Williams will serve as first assistant to Thomas M. Girdler, chairman of the board of the Republic Steel Corporation, who is also serving the plane corporation during the war.

Ghost Rail Line To Supply Steel For War Effort

Cleveland, Jan. 16 (AP).—A six million dollar dream that turned to rust will provide steel rails for the war effort.

The rails are coming from Cleveland's No. 1 "ghost line"—the almost-completed, never-used rapid transit from Terminal Tower, which dominates the downtown skyline, to East Cleveland.

The East Cleveland rapid transit was one of many unfinished dreams that whirled in the heads of the late Van Sweringen brothers, O. P. and M. J. Starting in the real estate business, they wound up buying the Nickel Plate Railroad to obtain the right of way for the still operated rapid transit which helped the "Vans" sell expensive home sites in smart, suburban Shaker Heights.

In 1929, they ordered construction started on what was planned as their second rapid transit. Tracks were laid but cars never used them. After standing idle a dozen years, the tracks were removed this week along a five-mile stretch. The rails will be reconditioned for use as sidings for defense industries.

Store Personnel Problem Expected To Become Worse

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Dr. C. J. Wright, an official of the United States Office of Education, today said that because of the expanding war effort the Nation's dry goods and department stores could expect an increasingly "acute" problem in finding competent workers.

Dr. Wright, assistant commissioner for vocational education, suggested at the final session of the National Retail Dry Goods Association convention that storekeepers look to these sources for full-time workers as more of their trained men and women go into the Army and industry:

Extras and other parttime employes; older men and women who have worked in retail stores; young married women living in rural areas near cities; young people who have just finished high school.

He noted that while these sources were still available he could not predict how long they would remain so.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—The grain market digested the latest Government program to raise more feed and oil-bearing crops and stimulated production of cereal consuming livestock with only minor price changes today.

Wheat and rye were up about ½ cent at one time and soybeans more than a cent but all of these gains were lost later, with rye and beans closing about ½ cent lower due to profit taking and some hedging sales.

Grain men said bearish prospects of greater supplies of some commodities, such as corn, soybeans and other feeds, were offset by bullish implications of increased demand. They said the most important feature of the increased production goals, as far as the market is concerned, is the fact that the Government stressed the price incentive as a major factor in stimulation of output. Steps to be taken to maintain and assure attractive prices to producers, such as the loan program and Government purchases, are of fundamental market significance, they said.

Bank Deposits' Drop Laid to Defense Bonds

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—A survey by the Savings Banks Association of the State of New York indicated today that people were buying defense bonds out of savings rather than current income.

Record purchases of defense bonds during December, said the association, were more than offset by withdrawals from savings accounts.

"Withdrawals of savings deposits generally necessitate sales of Government bonds by the savings institutions in order to maintain proper cash reserves," said Henry Bruere, president of the State Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

"Thus savings so transferred are merely switched from one type of Government bond to another, with little if any net gain to the defense financing program and at an actual increase in cost to the Government."

New York State savings banks sold $29,577,000 of defense securities in December. The loss in deposits that month totaled $27,550,000, despite the addition of $34,900,000 in year-end dividends.

"It is apparent," said Bruere, who also is the savings banks' liaison officer with the Treasury Department, "that many people, in their enthusiasm to support the defense savings campaign, have overlooked the true objective of the Treasury Department.

"Not until there is widespread shrinkage in civilian consumer spending, and regular additions to total savings, will the campaign for victory receive the right kind of popular financial support and the preservation of a sound economy be assured," Bruere concluded.

Chemical Fund Stock Offered

New York, Jan. 16 (AP). — The Chemical Fund, Inc., an investment company, announced today it would offer to stockholders and the general public 263,000 shares of capitol stock at an initial price of $9.62.

Under the terms of the offer, stockholders would be given discounts of from 4 to 6.75 per cent on purchases up to a number of shares equaling present holdings.

Attorneys' Fees In Tobacco Suit Held Exorbitant

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—A motion charging that "exorbitant and excessive" allowances were made by State Supreme Court Justice William T. Collins to attorneys who successfully prosecuted a stockholders' suit against the American Tobacco Co. last year was filed today in supreme court by Harry Richman, a stockholder.

Compensation to the attorneys and accountants and reimbursements to several defendants against whom no case was established totaled $668,000. The suit resulted in a two million-dollar judgment against several company officials and the judgment later was settled for $1,600,000, to be paid in instalments over a period of years.

Richman asked permission to intervene in order to have the awards reviewed by the appellate division. The largest single allowance was $269,000 to Milton Paulson, general counsel for the plaintiffs.

Justice Collins reserved decision on the motion.

Retail Sales Spurt on Fear Of Shortages

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—Biggest dollar volume retail sales for this time of year in history was enjoyed by the Nation's stores this week as consumers rushed to stock their homes with needed goods for fear of higher prices, shortages and new taxes later on, merchants said today.

Dun & Bradstreet reported sales averaged 13 to 20 per cent above a year ago for the country as a whole.

"Retail trade had more of the character of fall than of January," the credit agency said. "The first month ordinarily is one of the dullest months of the year. But helped along not only by clearances and special sales, but also by consumers' stock-up purchasing in some lines, dollar trade averaged the best for the period on record. In many instances retailers found evidence of an anticipatory buying movement comparable to that of last August.

"Department stores and specialty shops which had an important share in the 'shortage' buying were doing better than average in sales results," the agency added.

"Wool and rubber goods accounted for substantial sales volume."

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 13—Income of Minors

An individual, although a minor, who is single, or is married and not living with husband or wife for any part of the taxable year, is required to render a return of income if he has a gross income of his own of $750 or over for the taxable year. If the aggregate gross income of such minor from any property which he possesses, and from any funds held in trust for him by a trustee or guardian, and from his earnings which belong to him is $750, a return, as in the case of any other individual, must be made by him or for him by his guardian, or other person charged with the care of his person or property. If under the laws of the State the earnings of the minor belong to the minor, such earnings, regardless of amount, are not required to be included in the return of the parent. In the absence of proof to the contrary, a parent will be assumed to have the legal right to the earnings of the minor and must include them in his return.

Where a minor is married and living with his spouse for the entire taxable year, and each has income and their combined gross income is $1500 or over, they must each make a return or file a joint return. If only one has income and his gross income is $1500 or over, only that one is required to make a return.

Where a minor is married and living with his spouse for only part of the taxable year, and each has income and their combined gross income is $1500 or over, or equal to, or in excess of, their total personal exemption (not including credit as head of family or for dependents), they must each make a return or file a joint return. If only one has income and his gross income is $1500 or over, or equal to, or in excess of, his personal exemption (not including credit as head of a family or for dependent), only that one is required to file a return.

The Outlook

By Merryle S. Rukeyser, Post Special Writer

Tact and Courtesy Are Vital to Maintain Customer Good Will in Sellers' Market

Business management has a delicate and useful role to play in the civilian industries in war time.

In trades where priority shortages exist or where excessive demand tends to make customary quality of service difficult, businessmen should try to maintain customer loyalty and good will through tact and courtesy.

Otherwise in the critical war period, companies will needlessly liquidate in a few months intangible assets of public good will which were slowly accumulated through the long years.

Perhaps some plain talk is needed. This is far more than an academic question.

On the other hand, during the current civilian tire famine, at least two of the major companies have shown fine common sense in explaining the position of the industry during the present war crisis. These companies, while having nothing available for immediate general sale, nevertheless bought advertising space in order to show their customers the courtesy of interpreting the present abnormal situation.

Such negative merchandising served two major purposes, first, it achieved the patriotic objective of helping civilians to adjust themselves to the situation which the high command deems necessary and advisable, giving civilians concrete advice as to how to conserve inventory now in their hands. And, secondly, it prevented the inevitable unpleasantness incidental to sacrifice from being emotionally converted into dislike of the tire companies which, of course, were not responsible.

Where rapidly changing war exigencies require civilians to forego buying as usual, businessmen should not be snooty, but should aim to be extremely courteous and patient in explaining why their customers cannot do the things which merchants formerly importuned them to do.

Dealers and distributors, who need turnovers to earn their keep, should not be unmindful of the fact that in being forced to say "no" to their customers, they are in effect pushing themselves out of business. It may be that one of the costs of the war will be putting some business enterprises on the casualty list, but certainly the victims should not become haughty toward their own customers whatever their own personal prospects.

After victory has been won, customer loyalty will again be a major ingredient in business success.

And civilians will long remember those businessmen who were patient, tolerant and courteous toward them even during the current sellers' market.

Businessmen should abstain from causing needless hysteria. For example, an inquiry to a southern railway about April service was badly handled in an un-selling spirit. The "salesman" (?) said that he couldn't give any information as to the continuance of good trains in view of uncertainty as to troop movements. Such an attitude tends to chill civilian enthusiasm for planning to buy such goods and services as may be available.

The same facts could have been affirmatively stated as follows: "Last year we maintained these trains until mid-April and the company doubtless will do the same this year unless the Government requests us to do otherwise."

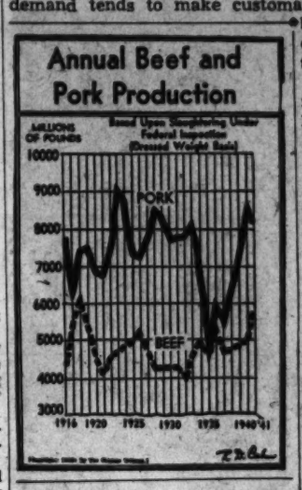
Likewise, railroads in some cities have greatly shortened the period during which they will hold reservations. Such a curtailment of service to customers seems illogical, because the prevailing peak demand obviates the risk to the carriers that holding reservations may result in unsold space.

On the contrary, when it is released by the person originally seeking the accommodation, there is almost invariably a group waiting for it. At Washington, an agent of one of the trunk lines said that the railroad had discontinued the practice of compiling waiting lists for released space.

At Chicago, another trunkline permitted a sleeping car to leave the terminal when the lights were dim and the car was obviously in need of repair.

Even when conditions of supply and demand upset the normal standard of service, top management in all lines should instruct its personnel that its motto is still "The Public Be Pleased." Even if war conditions make goods and services temporarily unavailable, persons in business should undertake to be gracious, even when rushed.



Railroad Nets Up 75 Million In December

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 87 class 1 railroads had estimated operating revenues of $390,305,161 in December compared with $315,685,275 in December, 1940.

The association said the 87 reporting carriers represented 82.7 per cent of total operating revenues.

Freight revenues of the reporting railroads amounted to $317,006,193 compared with $253,753,130 in December, 1940. Passenger revenues totaled $44,093,310 compared with $34,648,997.

Fewer Varieties But No Shortage Of Paints Seen

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 16 (AP).—Hardware stores will carry fewer container sizes and fewer colors of paint, but there will be no paint shortage during the war, Ernest T. Trigg, of Washington, president of the National Paint, Varnish & Lacquer Association, said today.

"There will be changes in paint formulae," Trigg, a member of the OPM chemical advisory committee, added in an interview. "Certainly there will be less white lead used in paints and zinc oxide has become a problem because large quantities of zinc are being used in war materials.

"There will be some sacrifices, perhaps in the drying qualities and durability of paints, but nevertheless good, serviceable paints always will be available."

He asserted the number of colors has been reduced from 32 to 18 in house paints, with corresponding reductions in floor paints, enamels and varnishes, and that the quarter pint and half-gallon sizes have been eliminated.

Chemical List Leads Stocks In Lower Drift

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—The stock market generally turned downward today as many bidders withdrew to neutral territory as a weekend precaution against international eventualities.

The list was only moderately irregular until after midday, when prices began to fade. While real selling pressure was absent, the drift carried many leaders fractions to a point or so lower with several "blue chips" dropping 2 to more than 3.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with a net decline of .4 of a point at 37.9. The composite has shown only two advances since January 6. Except for a brief flurry after noon, dealings were negligible throughout. Transfers totaled 477,000 shares compared with 446,770 Thursday and were among the smallest since October 14 last.

War News Is Standoff

Wall Street again found the war news about a standoff marketwise. Some encouragement was derived from word Admiral Hart's Asiatic fleet had sunk five more Japanese ships and that Australian reinforcements had a good chance of stemming the Malayan invasion. On the other hand, the menace of enemy submarines off the Atlantic Coast, with the Navy confirming the sinking of another tanker yesterday not far from New York, tended to dim enthusiasm over Far Eastern dispatches.

On the bullish side were estimates of a broad climb in this week's retail spending as customers rushed to stock up in fear of rising prices and shortages. Persistent tax doubts remained as a market handicap, brokers said.

Some chemical shares developed heaviness as the thought occurred that companies in this line might be adversely affected if Congress should alter the excess profits tax base.

Chemical Shares Drop

Among bellwethers, du Pont fell 3¾ points to a new 1941-42 bottom. Lesser losers included Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Dow Chemical, U. S. Gypsum, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, American Smelting, American Telephone, Union Pacific, Western Union, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Texas Co.

Wheat and cotton declined in skittish trade while commodity futures dealers kept a collective eye on pending control legislation and studied Government plans for stepping up output of farm products to record levels.

Cotton at New York lost early gains and ended 45 to 70 cents a bale lower.

Chicago wheat also tried at higher levels but fell back to finish unchanged to ¼ cent a bushel lower. Corn ended in the same range.

Import of Axis Stamps Barred to Destroy Racket

Importation of postage stamps from Axis or Axis-occupied nations was banned by the Treasury yesterday in a move to destroy a "racket" which allegedly has netted the totalitarian powers an estimated 20 million dollars.

Department officials said the Axis, "more desperate than ever for the coveted American dollars necessary to carry on their program of sabotage and treachery," have issued new stamp series in occupied nations which were being forwarded to United States stamp collectors through neutral countries.

The Treasury ordered customs collectors to prohibit such imports and appealed to "patriotic stamp collectors and dealers" to give their full cooperation.

Plan to Bar Liquor Sales at Service Posts Is Defeated

The Senate defeated yesterday an effort of Senator O'Daniel (Democrat), of Texas, to obtain immediate consideration of a measure barring the sale of liquors, wines and beers at Army and Navy posts.

O'Daniel's motion to take up the bill, made on the anniversary of the ratification of national prohibition, was announced as lost on a voice vote and later on a standing vote.

O'Daniel previously had urged the Senate, in a lengthy prepared address, to approve the bill, originally introduced by his predecessor, the late Senator Morris Sheppard, often called "the father of prohibition."

Listen! with Glynn

A very pleasant and carefree radio program is celebrating both an anniversary and a reunion today—with the net effect that the usually unpretentious musical hour in the middle of Saturday afternoon boasts an array of talent that you'd have a hard time finding on some of the more elaborate variety hours of the air.

It's C. B. S.'s "Matinee at Meadowbrook," which you hear over WJSV from 4 to 5 o'clock. The birthday is its first. And in honor of that important occasion all the program alumni who are available are appearing on the broadcast.

That would include Gene Krupa and Jimmy Dorsey, the famous popular band leaders, both of whom are playing New York engagements; Pianist Walter Gross, who's also a band leader; Comedian Jim Backus and Jone Allison, Peggy Zinke and Jackie Grimes, three C. B. S. players who appeared on the series when it first started. Then Jackson Wheeler, "Matinee's first master of ceremonies, is also to make a return engagement.

These will be in addition to Alvino Rey's Orchestra, with the King Sisters, who presently hold the regular band spot on the show, and Bert Parks, who serves as the emcee.

What pleases most of the guests most is that they're being given a special police escort from New York to nearby Meadowbrook in New Jersey—with a patrol wagon and everything.

Contract Bridge

Our friend Sam Fry, jr., is featured in a holiday dispute concerning the proper bidding of a slam hand. A psychic opening bid troubled our contributor and his wife and resulted in a bottom on the board for them when they stopped short of six. The wife's bidding was supported by Sam. The husband has his own reasons for this, and thereby hangs the argument.

The cards are shown in today's box; here is what the contributor-husband, S. W., says of the deal:

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
EAST DEALER

	♠ K J 8 2 ♡ 8 5 ◇ K Q 9 4 ♣ Q 3 2
♠ 10 ♡ 10 7 4 3 2 ◇ 8 7 6 5 3 ♣ K 4	WEST	NORTH EAST SOUTH
	♠ A Q 9 7 6 5 4 3 ♡ A J 6 ◇ 2 ♣ A
		♠ None ♡ K Q 9 ◇ A J 10 ♣ J 10 9 8 7 6 5

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
5 ♣	5 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: K ♣.

"In the duplicate game at the Forest Hills Bridge Club last week this hand was dealt. My wife and I played North and South, respectively, and we obtained low score at five spades—all other North-South pairs bid and made six spades.

"My bidding was based on the reasoning that I had game in my hand and that East had opened either a psychic or that he had four or five spades to the king, jack; probably king, queen, ten of hearts; ace and two honors in diamonds; two or three honors in clubs.

"After partner passed my four-spade bid and East bid five clubs, I revised my estimate of the East hand to six clubs with three honors—to about six clubs, four spades and three and one in the other two suits.

"I contend that my partner should have bid both after my first and second bids to show the strength of her holding. My wife says that my bidding was wrong—that my first bid should be a double(in which she is supported by her nephew, Sam Fry, jr., or a three or five-spade bid which would give her an idea of my hand.

"The opening lead of the club king by West gave me a slam which could not be made except by that opening lead.

"Please give us your opinion regarding the correct bidding.

The accepted method of dealing with a "suit-psychic" is first to make a take-out double, indicating strength and forcing partner to bid or make a penalty pass, then double, as the wife in the story suggested.

But we would not be very unhappy about not reaching six with this hand; a bottom score is not fun of course, but if the club king were not doubleton, a heart opening would kill all chance of South's making twelve tricks.

As it is, even with a heart lead, he can make the slam. He takes the heart trick with the ace, takes the ace of spades and ace of clubs, then enters dummy with a spade. He leads a low club and trumps, catching West's king. A spade to the dummy allows South to discard his losing diamond on the club queen; now he can give up one heart and trump one. The play would work about the same with a diamond opening, South throwing off two hearts in this case. Who would want to count on catching the club king doubleton, however.

'Eternal Youth' Experiment Is 30 Years Old

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 16.—A piece of living flesh, kept alive for 30 years in an "eternal youth" experiment, tomorrow will be the equivalent of 200 years old—in human terms.

The flesh was "born" on January 17, 1912, when the heart muscle of an unhatched chicken embryo was put into a special flask by Dr. Alexis Carrel. Dr. Carrel fed the flesh with a mixture of minced tissues of unhatched chickens and a solution consisting of salts and glucose.

The flesh at length was given the name "old strain" by the scientists in charge of it and "old strain" continued to be carefully nurtured by Dr. Carrel until 1939, when he left the Rockefeller Institute for medical research. The care of "old strain" then was taken over by Dr. Albert H. Ebling, of the Lederle Laboratories, and two assistants, E. Hull and Miss D. Olmstead.

The flesh today is as young as the day it was born. A tightly closed "Carrel flask" is its home for a week. Every seven days it is transferred to a new flask, when additional tissue culture medium is supplied to keep it alive.

"Old strain" grows 100 per cent every 48 hours, and this makes it necessary to remove a piece of it the size of a pinhead every two days.

Dr. Ebling pointed out that "if it had been feasible to keep and nourish every subculture that could have been derived from the original tiny fragment of heart, dividing each in turn ad infinitum, the mass of tissue today would be far larger than our whole solar system could maintain."

Axis Propaganda Aims to Split U. S. and British Public

Close monitoring of short-wave broadcasts from Berlin, Rome, Tokyo and Axis-occupied countries on both sides of the world has revealed a remarkable shell-and-pea propaganda game in recent weeks, all grooved to a single made-in-Berlin pattern.

There is no doubt in Washington that Paul Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda master mind, is personally directing the campaign hoping to create friction in United Nation ranks by short-wave air blasts.

British listeners were told that American admirals wept crocodile tears over the loss of the big British warships Prince of Wales and Repulse—the Nazi radio voice declared these admirals were actually delighted. At the same time an Axis broadcast tuned to American reception said British naval circles privately rejoiced over the destructive Japanese air attack on Pearl Harbor.

Another Axis dodge is simultaneous announcement to Americans that they have become British puppets and to the British public that the American war aim is to seize former British world markets and even parts of the British Empire in perpetuity in the guise of joint defense measures. Much also is made of alleged disgruntlement in the British and American armed forces over united command arrangements which would put them under orders of foreign leaders.

Impending world communism, due to collaboration with Russia, seems to be the most favored theme of the Axis short-wave artists. United Nations are told over and over again that they are a collection of "military and political cripples" certain to be dominated by Red Russia if Hitler's great "crusade" fails. It's a "holy war" in Russia to make the rest of the world safe from communism, according to the Axis version.

The Rio de Janeiro effort to American republics to reach a unity of action as well as purpose came in for special treatment from all three Axis sources.

The "peaceful" intentions of the Axis toward all the Western Hemisphere were compared to American "warmongering" and cynical "ultra imperialism" in Latin America. Assignment of Undersecretary Welles rather than Secretary Hull to head the American delegation was played up as an "insult."

The plain purpose is to concentrate American public attention on the Pacific front to the exclusion of what is going on in Europe. Berlin master minds obviously hope the American public will demand a stoppage of the flow of lend-lease war goods to Britain and Russia until Japan has been dealt with.

Every Japanese victory claim is instantly picked up and multiplied as illustrating American defenselessness in the Pacific and on the West Coast, although, at the same time, the air waves carry fulsome assurances that neither Germany, Italy nor Japan has any purpose or desire to attack the continental United States or any other country in this hemisphere.

One other Axis short-wave appeal—warnings to the Chinese, Filipinos and Pacific islanders of all shades and racial background to beware of "the white peril"—is thundered endlessly.
